DOWNEY ON STAND IN MULLINS TRIAL

Former Friend of Slain Girl Called as Witness, Is Closely Cross-Examined by Lawyer for Defence.

Peter Downey, the sweetheart of Annie Mullins, was placed on the witness stand to-day in the trial of James Mantir and Peter C. Delorey who are charged with her murder. Downey was questioned many times by the police about his acquaintance with the girl.

Downey caused a sensation when he walked down the aisle of the court room in response to the calling of his name. It was not known that he would be called in the case. Both of the prisoners turned with the rest of those in the room to catch a glimpse of the young man who had figured so prominently in the murder mystery.

Before Downey took the stand John Leroy Perkins, who was also questioned by the police in connection with the crime, swore he had known Annie Mullins, testified that he did not know her for about six months and that he had seen her on the morning of the day she was killed. He said she was in her usual spirits. Perkins had called at the Yon Jugemanns in connection with the grocery store in which he was employed.

Worked as Farm Hand.

Downey said that he had been working for more than a month as a farm hand at Revere. He said he had lived in 1907 and 1908 in Cherry Cambridge with his mother and was a pantryman on the Boston Elevated. Mr. Hardy questioned him.

Q.—Where did you first meet Annie Mullins? A.—In her place of work.

Q.—When? A.—In 1908, I think.

Q.—When did you last meet her? A.—In May, 1908, and did not see her before.

Q.—Hearing in mind that her death occurred on March 27, 1908, when was it you first met her? A.—I think I met her in November, but I was not well acquainted with her until after Christmas.

Q.—Did you see her in March, 1908? A.—No, sir, but I may be making a mistake.

Q.—Where did you last see her? A.—At her place of work at Professor Smyth's, Walker street, Cambridge.

Attorney Winslow then cross-examined Downey.

Visited in South Boston.

Q.—How old are you? A.—Something over twenty-six.

Q.—How old was Annie Mullins? A.—I couldn't tell you, sir.

Q.—Didn't you ever compare ages with her? A.—No, sir.

Q.—When did you first become acquainted with Annie Mullins? A.—As I have established, sir, maybe in 1907.

Q.—What month? A.—November or December, I think.

Q.—And then and she ever go out together? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you ever go to theatres or any other places with her? A.—I went with her once to South Boston to a house which I thought was her mother's. Once I walked to Harvard square with her to her place of work.

Q.—Was it at Mrs. Glancoe's house that you were in South Boston? A.—I think so.

Q.—When was that? A.—About February or March.

Q.—One year ago last March? A.—No, two years ago.

Q.—When did you see her next? A.—About a week later.

Q.—And you didn't see Annie Mullins for ten months prior to her death? A.—I did not.

At Home Night of Tragedy.

Q.—Do you know when she died? A.—On March 27, 1908.

Q.—What was your employment then? A.—I was a motorman.

Q.—On the night of March 27, 1908, did you stop at a drug store in Cambridge about 7 o'clock? A.—I did not.

Q.—Didn't you tell a conductor on a car that night that you had an appointment to meet a girl? A.—I did not. I wasn't out of the house that night.

Q.—Didn't you get off a car at the corner of Prescott street and Massachusetts avenue on the night of March 27, 1908? A.—I did not. (This with decided emphasis).

Q.—Did you wear an overcoat that night? A.—No overcoat because I don't go out.

Q.—Did you wear an overcoat the night before? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was the color of that coat? A.—It's a black coat.

Q.—Is it a long coat? A.—No, its medium.

Q.—Did you go to the Yon Jagemann house that night? A.—I told you I wasn't out of my own house and how could I go to the Yon Jagemann house when I wasn't out of my own.

Q.—Don't answer the question—did you go there? A.—No. (Downey fairly shouted the answer.)

BARE LOVE AFFAIRS OF STEINHEIL

PARIS, Nov. 10.—The love secrets of Mme. Marguerite Steinheil, which she has resolutely struggled to keep undisclosed, were bared to-day at her trial by Marisette Wolff, for fifteen years cook in the Steinheil household.

The old servant, whose son Alexandre was once accused of the Steinheil murders by the widow, declared that the artist knew of his wife's affairs of the heart and never protested. Marisette Wolff told of the meetings between Mme. Steinheil and M. Chouanard, the iron master, and M. Borderel, the rich provincial, for love of whom the prosecution charged, Mme. Steinheil killed her husband and her stepmother, Mme. Japy.

The cook gave her testimony in spite of the prisoner's protestations. From the first Mme. Steinheil has sought to show that her husband died in ignorance of her wife's love.

With the appearance of the Wolf woman the crisis of the trial was at hand. The witness described in detail the affairs of the mysterious Vert Logis—the establishment where Mme. Steinheil was known as Mme. Prevost. The secrets of the love affairs that have puzzled France were laid bare in part.

"Husband Not Angry."

"M. Steinheil saw his wife's vices," testified the cook, ignoring the frantic appeals of the prisoner to spare the dead artist. "He saw M. Chouanard and he saw M. Borderel go there. He knew all about it, and he was not angry at all."

Mme. Steinheil, made the host of the testimony, though the attitude of heroic protection of the dead man, which she maintained since the trial opened, was again characteristic.

The cook gave the beautiful defendant a reputation quite different from that which the prosecution has attempted to establish, and that in spite of Mme. Steinheil having accused Alexandre Wolff, the cook's son, of the double murder in the hideous assault in the first furor created by the case.

"Mme. Steinheil" the cook testified, "was a good housewife. She was an affectionate daughter to Mme. Japy and was good to her husband. She nursed him when he was ill. A good servant sees everything," the cook went on with a ugly smile.

"Good Servant Says Nothing."

"Tell what went on," she was ordered. "A good servant says nothing," she answered, and a ripple of laughter went over the crowded court room. Not until she was put under a severe grilling did the servant tell more of the details of the Vert Logis. "Hermann Alexandre visited the Steinheil house twice," she declared.

Mme. Steinheil was today the commanding figure in the court room, as she has been from the first day of her trial. Her continued success in fighting the allegations of the prosecution and producing a favorable impression, not only on the jury but indirectly on the public, had aided to her animation and to-day as she entered the Court of the Assizes she seemed almost buoyant.

That the court feared the unfavorable influence of Mme. Steinheil, became apparent when Marisette Wolff was on the stand. At one time the presiding judge, M. De Vallies, ordered the witness not to look at the prisoner. The cook virtually defended her old employer, contrary to all expectation.

"No Talk of Suicide."

"It is a shame to say that she killed M. Steinheil," she declared, in direct contradiction of the journalists who yesterday told of Mme. Steinheil's threats of suicide, and of an alleged attempt at suicide by Marisette Wolff, the cook to-day declared: "There was no talk about suicide at all or any attempt. On the night of November 25, when Mme. Steinheil was questioned so much, I held no conversation with her. As she was led away by the police she stopped to embrace me and to say farewell, that was all.

"I had no reason to want to die, for I did not know then that my son was accused of the murders."

RINGS OF ST. JEAN GIRL FOUND TO-DAY

FALL RIVER, Nov. 10.—The silver two rings, one an opal set in brilliants, the jewelry of Amelia St. Jean, which had been removed before Frank L. Hill, according to his confession, dismembered her body in his office in this city, was dug up to-day in the earthen floor of an abandoned building near Bay street, Tiverton. Hill, in court yesterday at Taunton, told where he had placed the golden trinkets.

Police Inspector Shea and John Simpson, a Tiverton boy, found the articles. They went to the deserted building which stands about 100 feet from the corner of Bay street, where the car line passes, and entering the tumble-down structure began digging in the northwest corner. There for down they found the articles of jewelry told about by Dr. Hill. The articles of jewelry found, gold chain, pendant and pin, the pin being marked "N. A. A. 1905."

An autopsy was performed on the head of the dead girl to-day. Medical Examiners Gunning and Stimpson and Dr. George E. Butler of Fall River did the work. There was nothing learned that would clear the mystery as to the actual cause of the girl's death.

The head had been severed with a knife and saw. There was no fracture of the skull or indication of other violence on the head. The case stands now just where Hill left it yesterday in his confession with no evidence at hand to disprove anything he said.

Hill was taken back to the New Bedford jail after the reading of his amazing confession in the Taunton Court yesterday.

MRS. EDDY ENDS SUIT WITH SONS

A family settlement between Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy and George W. Glover (a son) and Ebenezer J. Foster Eddy (an adopted son), has been concluded and the deeds embodying the terms of said settlement have been duly executed and delivered. Under these settlement arrangements and the trust heretofore established by Mrs. Eddy, George W. Glover and his family receive the sum of $245,000 and Ebenezer J. Foster Eddy the sum of $45,000.

On January 25, 1907, Mrs. Eddy conveyed to Frank S. Streeter, Archibald McLellan and Irving C. Tomlinson $125,000 in trust for her son George and his family which these trustees now hold. To that trust fund of $125,000 is now added $50,000 of the present payment to George W. Glover, making the total amount held by said trustees the sum of $175,000, which added to the balance of the moneys now held, make $245,000 which is to flow over or set apart in trust for the benefit of him self and his family.

Details of Arrangement.

The two sons in consideration of these moneys, have executed deeds relinquishing all their present and prospective rights or expectant interests in their mother's estate either as heirs-at-law, or as legatees under any will now or heretofore made by Mrs. Eddy.

The sons respectively covenant that neither they nor anyone claiming under them will contest or retard the probate of any will which their mother may leave, or attempt to set aside any gifts, deed or other disposition of property which she has heretofore made, or make any further claim at any time to any portion of her property or estate.

They also severally acknowledge that full particulars regarding her estate have been exhibited to them. The details of this settlement have been under consideration since last September.

William E. Chandler, John W. Kelly and Martin and Howe were counsel on behalf of the sons, and Henry M. Baker with Frank S. Streeter represented Mrs. Eddy. The settlement deeds were submitted to Samuel J. Elder and were approved by him.

In Next Friends Suit.

George W. Glover, a son of Mrs. Eddy, and Ebenezer J. Foster, an adopted son, were the principals in the famous "next friend" suit which was brought against those close to Mrs. Eddy. The plaintiffs alleged improper influence over Mrs. Eddy gave her famous interview to the newspaper men at Concord. The lower courts found in favor of the defendant, but the case was appealed.

The action of the sons of Mrs. Eddy was the basis for the oft-repeated statement that Mrs. Eddy is no longer the leading influence of the Christian Science Church, but is in the hands of a coterie of men who are using her as a figurehead.

RECOUNT GIVES PELLETIER 3

The recount of the votes cast in Chelsea for governor, district-attorney and commissioner for the board of control was completed to-day. The returns gave Draper 1,594, and on the recount he gained ten.

Valley's original returns were 1,832, but on the recount he lost five votes. Although Valley lost on the recount his plurality is now 223, the previous figures being given out 127. The mistake was made in adding the totals.

There was a gain of one vote for Hill and three for Pelletier in the district attorneyship fight. The final count was given to the Governor's Council to-day in order to have Pelletier sworn in this week.

In the returns for commissioner for the board of control the vote for George H. Lunham, 1899, remains the same, while Francis X. Tyrell gained two votes, the original returns giving him 1,542.

OLD MAN HELD AS MAIL FRAUD

Albert B. Clark, the man with the green shade over his eyes, and known to the people as the man with a dozen aliases who claims he is eighty-one years old, was held in $500 to-day for the Federal Grand Jury by United States Commissioner Hayes, on the charge of using the mails for a scheme to defraud.

Clark's method, according to the police, was to advertise that he had several good positions at his disposal. He would then collect $100 as an evidence of good faith. Clark has been recognized as an old time swindler. Some of his aliases are John Warren, J. J. Carter, E. D. King, J. F. King, C. M. Nash, "Doc" Warren, Jerry S. McLaine, James Marshall, Reddy Dougherty and Jim Long. He has served time in California, Missouri, Philadelphia and New York. Clark says he has sixteen aliases. His prison record shows him to be only seventy-two years old.

TILT ABOUT EVIDENCE IN STEEL TRIAL

Most of the morning session of the "steel" trial was taken up by arguments between counsel in an attempt to exclude some of the testimony of Walter Shephard, who was chief engineer of the Boston & Albany railroad in 1903—1906.

Mr. Shephard was asked as to certain bids made to the company in 1905 for the construction of a bridge at Chatham County, New York. Invitations to bid were extended to the same companies as are under trial, and District Attorney Hill is trying to show the existence of a monopoly.

Chief Engineer Snow of the Boston & Maine Railroad, who was on the stand when the court was yesterday, was excused to-day, so that he might go on a trip of inspection of his road by Boston & Maine directors and officials.

Frederick H. Fay, city bridge engineer of Boston, identified certain bids which were submitted to the city.

George L. Bliss, a real estate agent, of No. 32 Hill street, identified a letter signed by the B. B. Contract Company. The District Attorney is seeking to prove the writing of the signs for the firm. Counsel Hurlburt objected to this evidence, but he was overruled.

WOMAN FALLS TO DEATH IN WATER

Mrs. Flata Martial, aged fifty, of No. 13 Webster avenue, East Boston, was drowned to-day off Maverick street dump. She was picking over the rubbish there when she was taken with a fit, to which she was subject, and fell into the water. At high tide the water here is deep. Joseph Scott of No. 85 Paris street, Thomas Foley of No. 62 Everett street, and Daniel Smith of No. 93 Everett street ran to her rescue. Foley by means of a rake was able to draw the body ashore.

AMES TO FLY AT LOWELL?

LOWELL, Nov. 10.—Congressman Butler Ames has received permission to erect a temporary wooden building on land in Pawtucketville near the Tyngsboro line. This was given rise to the report that he will resume there some some of the tests on the flying machine which were interrupted when he left here to attend the last session of Congress.

SAYS RUSSELL CLAIMANT IS NOW HIDING

Attorney Berry for William C. Russell, who is fighting the claim of Daniel Blake Rivoll to one-half of the $300,000 estate left by Daniel Russell of Melrose, told Judge Lawton to-day that the progress of the case was being greatly hindered and that a keen espionage was being instituted by Attorney Simpson's attitude in keeping the claimant in the case under concealment.

"With the claimant in hiding we wish to show the efforts of the said claimant to secure the services of him from his boyhood friends," said Mr. Berry. "These friends are friends of Russell. Public sentiment is being lashed to such a way that it is being used to our disadvantage. Evidence has ever been tried before. We are going to show identified several places the claimant seen by his friends, and we are continually frustrated in our attempts."

This statement was made by Attorney Berry after Mr. Simpson had admitted that Alonzo Riley of Memphis, N. Y., had been prevented from seeing the claimant on his recent visit to that city.

Mr. Riley, who was the first witness, said that he knew James Russell in 1893, and that he went to school at Messina Springs. He also identified several photographs as those of the James Russell he knew at that time.

CABLES GONE, FEAR JAMAICA STORM SWEPT

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—At the office of the Commercial Cable Company to-day it was said that the cable to Halifax, Bay, Jamaica, was working but that the lines to Kingston were all down. The Western Union Company reported that its last cable to Jamaica had failed.

"Our service was first interrupted sunday, soon after our office there reported that a hurricane was sweeping over the island," General Manager Barclay of the Western Union said. "We kept one cable working for a while but that is gone now. We think the hurricane caused the shipping in the harbors to drag anchors and they ripped up the cables. Conditions there may be very serious."

C. C. Sweeny, superintendent of the French Cable Company, said:

"The only points therapeutic that our cables now reach are in Cuba, the Cape Haitien station and Holland Bay. From this we gather that the hurricane has swept most of the West Indies."

Reports of widespread and heavy damage, accompanied by considerable loss of life are expected when communication is restored. Considerable shipping undoubtedly suffered heavily.

DELOREY SANG 'RAG TIME' ON ARREST, SAYS CARNEY

Q.—Did you ever go there? A.—Yes, often.

Q.—What brought you there? A.—I worked there.

Employed by Von Jagemann.

Q.—You did—you worked for Professor Von Jagemann? A.—Yes. I worked for him for a long time.

Q.—Was Annie Mullins working there at the same time? A.—Yes. I worked for him before Annie Mullins worked there.

Q.—Now, Mr. Downer, didn't you call on Annie Mullins on the night of March 27th, 1908? A.—How could I call on her when I hadn't seen her for ten months. (The answer was shouted.)

Q.—Answer the question, didn't you call on her that night? A.—No, I did not.

Q.—Were you not in Dyson's drug store in Cambridge on the night of March 27, 1908? A.—No, sir, I was not.

Downey was then excused. He had appeared quite nervous when he was first called, but he became settled as his examination proceeded. When he left the stand his face was flushed with the excitement that his cross-examination had caused.

POLICEMAN TELLS OF "THIRD DEGREE" FOR YOUNG DELOREY

Police Sergeant Cadney resumed the witness stand when court opened for the completion of his direct testimony. He was questioned by Assistant District Attorney Hardy:

Q.—Was Peter Delorey brought out from his cell for a third time on the night of April 2, 1909? A.—Yes, he was brought out after midnight.

Q.—Did you have any conversation with him at that time? A.—Yes. I asked Peter if he could remember anyone that saw him and Mantie together that night when Annie Mullins was killed or if he could remember anyone was now with them the night. He said he couldn't just then, but that he would think it over during the night and that if he thought of anyone he would tell me the next morning.

Where They Met Girl.

Q.—Did you have any conversation with him the next morning? A.—Yes. I asked him the next morning if he had remembered any one who saw him and Mantie with the girl. He said he could not think of no one that he knew that had seen them.

Q.—Did you go from the police station to the court house that morning with the two defendants? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you have any conversation with them? A.—Yes, we went from the police station to the court house on a hack, and just before we got to Porter st. I said to Peter: "Can you point out the place where you and Mantie met Annie Mullins on the night of the murder?" Peter looked out of the window and said: "It is just a little further." He kept saying that until we got to Hewlett's crossing, when he said: "It was right about there that we met her." He pointed to the sidewalk.

Denied by Delorey.

Attorney Winslow took up the cross-examination of the witness.

Q.—You didn't take Mantie to Lowell, did you as you stated you would? A.—No. I intended to take him to Lowell the next morning but he changed his mind after Delorey made his confession that night.

Q.—What did Peter say at first regarding the murder of Annie Mullins? A.—Peter denied any knowledge of the murder.

Q.—Then his aunt was brought into the room? A.—Yes.

After describing how Delorey was questioned in an adjoining room the witness continued.

Q.—Now Mrs. Delorey told her story? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you remember Lieutenant Hosley's asking Peter about the razor? A.—Yes. He said to Peter: "Tell us what became of the razor?"

Q.—And what did Peter say? A.—Peter said that he didn't know what became of the razor.

Q.—Didn't Gordon at one time tell Peter that he lied? A.—Mr. Gordon did say at one time, "I don't believe you Peter; I think you're lying."

The witness said that Peter began to cry when his aunt entered the room.

Q.—Did you call at Mrs. Delorey's house the night that he was arrested, and if so what did you do? A.—I called at his house and was ushered into the front room by his father. I told him of his son's trouble, and he said that he knew it. I told him that he had been arrested for murder. He said that he knew it, and said that a number had been there five minutes before and told him of it.

Q.—Did you get any information while you were at the house. A.—Yes, I got Peter's clothes.

Q.—Anything else? A.—Yes, some small trinkets.

Q.—Anything else? A.—Yes, I got some letters.

Q.—Anything else A.—Yes, some postal cards.

Q.—What did you do with these things A.—I left them in the station house.

Peter Sang "Rag Time."

Q.—What did you give to the postal cards and letters to? A.—I gave them to Lieutenant Gordon.

Q.—Well, why didn't you say so without my asking five or six questions? asked Judge Pelt said. "There is no occasion for rebuking the witness," Mr. Winslow said. "I don't intend to," said Mr. McDermott, "but I want to get direct answers and not questions."

Q.—How many postal cards did you get at Peter's house that night? A.—Two.

Q.—What clothing did you take? A.—A coat, pants, vest and inside clothes.

Q.—Have the clothes and the trinkets that you took been returned? A.—Yes.

Q.—Have the letters and postals been returned? A.—I think so.

Q.—Was Peter laughing and joking after he arrived? A.—Yes, and he started to sing.

Q.—Where? A.—At the corner of Hanover and Washington streets, Boston, and he started to dance while singing a rag time song.

COUNSEL'S REBUKE OF POLICE WITNESS RESENTED BY COURT

Lieutenant Herbert Gordon of the Cambridge police took the stand at 10:07. He testified that he knew both defendants, stating not them the day they were arrested.

Lieutenant Gordon after telling of Delorey's confession, and of being cross-examined before, was cross-examined by Attorney Winslow:

Q.—Before Peter Delorey made the confession was anything said to him to the effect that the Greek had confessed? A.—No, did it? A.—No.

Q.—Didn't somebody say to Peter, "Well, the Greek says you did it"? A.—No.

Q.—Didn't you tell Peter that you wouldn't let a bow-legged Greek get away with you that way? A.—No. Never was no duress of any kind used.

Q.—What do you mean by duress? A.—Well, perhaps I don't use the word right, by that I mean that he was not threatened if he was not told that he would be put in a dark cell or anything like that.

Q.—Well, if you don't know what the meaning of the word duress is, what do you use it for? A.—Perhaps I wouldn't have used it but what I mean was there were no threats.

Q.—Well, if you don't know what words are, don't use them.

Judge Pelt leaned over and said to Attorney Winslow: "There is no occasion for rebuking the witness or telling him what he should do or what he shouldn't do. Proceed with your questioning.

Great Unknown Planet Far Beyond Neptune.

PARIS—M. Camille Flammarion contributes an article to the press on a planet of which mathematical calculations indicate its existence somewhere in the space beyond the orbit of Neptune. M. Flammarion's calculations in 1879 placed the orbit of this unknown world eight billion kilometres distant from the sun. Mr. Pickering's calculations last year place it at a distance of 7,723 million kilometres and give it a revolution around the sun once in 373 years. By means of a diagram M. Flammarion makes these stupendous distances comprehensible to the human mind. As M. Flammarion has made a special study of Mars he was asked for an opinion on an alleged cataclysm with that planet which appears to have disquieted several American journals. He laughed and said the reports of a cataclysm are fanciful.

MELLEN IN DEFIANCE OF MASSACHUSETTS CARRIES OUT MERGER

J. Pierpont Morgan looms up to-day as the "Master of the New Haven." In a few swift moves on the railroad chessboard he is to bring about the retirement of Charles S. Mellen as president of the New Haven road and the election to the presidency of Howard Elliott, now president of the Northern Pacific road.

Mr. Morgan plans a great merger of "transcontinental interests" comprising the New York, Ontario & Western 13,000 miles), Boston & Maine and New Haven roads (10,000 miles), Pennsylvania Railroad (11,-202 miles), and Santa Fe Railroad (9,450 miles), making a combined railroad system across the continent of over 30,000 miles dominated by Morgan and Rockefeller and headed by Charles S. Mellen in charge of the running of the various railroads.

The transcontinental system will be ready now and forever when it permitted after much talk and blustering the formation of the so-called Holding Company by which the New Haven grabbed the Boston & Maine. Mr. Morgan had been waiting for this kind institution to step in, and in he stepped. He has worked fast, cut go Mr. Tuttle and the directors in the Boston & Maine; in come Mr. Mellen and Mr. Morgan's men to run the Boston & Maine.

Mr. Morgan wants an issue of $40,000,000 additional New Haven stock. It is ordered issued. All but $10,000,000 worth of this stock will be kindly sold to the public.

Mellen is very tractable. Mr. Morgan has an international reputation as being the hottest of financiers. Neither will brook any interferences with their plans, and the Massachusetts legislature surrendered its rights to interference. Mr. Morgan's position of "We don't care what you think" is shown when Bank Commissioner Chapin called him yesterday about the new issue of stock:

"Have you applied to the Railroad Commission for approval of this proposed stock issue?"

"No," said Mr. Mellen. "Not one dollar of the money is to be spent in Massachusetts."

Slap at Attorney General.

Mr. Chapin suggested that the attorney-general's opinion was to the effect that the New Haven had violated the law in its issuance of securities without consulting the Massachusetts authorities.

"That is the opinion of the attorney-general," replied Mr. Mellen; "it may not be the law."

"I don't you think there should be such a tribunal for the protection of the public?" continued Mr. Chapin.

"Yes; for the reason that you do not always have honest officials; but with conflicting State jurisdictions, it can be done only at Washington. When that is done, and the same rule is applied to all railways, my company will have no complaint whatever."

Won't Spend Money Here.

"Oh, we are not going to spend the money in Massachusetts," said President Mellen concisely when Bank Commissioner Chapin asked him yesterday why he had not secured permission of the Railroad Commission to issue the stock.

"Publicity is all right theoretically, but practically it works havoc with business," said President Mellen to the Bank Commissioner.

Now that Harriman is dead, Morgan seems to have come into his own again quickly, and is about to bring about his long cherished desire to weld together a trans-continental railroad. Harriman worked no competition in his trans-continental railroad schemes. Morgan was forced to take a place in the background when all that is over, and the Wall street financier has started out to become American railroad dictator.

And where does Boston fit in this new scheme of things? Boston seems to be in doubt that on Tuesday, when the Boston & Maine directors meet, President Tuttle will "resign" (?) in Mr. Mellen's favor.

Boston Control Is Gone.

Boston thus loses one of its own men as head of the $1,000,000,000 railroad. With all retirement the Boston & Maine goes to become a piece of isolated railroad property and becomes a factor in the calculations of men who are planning big things.

PLAN TO BAR ANTI-RAILROAD LAW MAKING

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Urging cooperation with a view to preventing anti-railroad legislation the executive committee of the Railway Business Men's Association to-day presented its report at its second annual meeting here. The report declares that a fight should be made for laws just to the railroads and the public. Nothing is to be derived from a policy of obstruction by the roads, it declares.

"There will be commissions, whether the railroads like it or not," says the report. "The committee offers as the best possible action by Congress at its coming session to revision of the laws regulating interstate commerce and believes it a subject in which the whole people should interest itself, saying:

"Should the new legislation be framed in the full knowledge and with the absence of retaliatory animus, a policy of regulation may be established equally alike to the public and the railroads and reasonably certain to assure equal and adequate and adequate development of facilities.

"It is our conviction that no real benefit can come from a general program of obstruction to legislation. Regulation has come to stay."

The report, discussing the possibility of another resection of public feeling against railroads, says the least evil which could attend such a reaction would be renewed efforts to have the government more and more absorb railroad properties. Such a step the report calls "a dangerous strife toward government ownership."

MURPHY AND PHELAN SOUNDED ON MAYORALTY BY COMMITTEE OF 100

Men identified with the Committee of One Hundred movement to-day interviewed John H. Murphy, former water commissioner, and James J. Phelan, of the banking firm of Hornblower & Weeks, and asked them to approve the presentation of their names as mayoralty candidates to the committee of nine, appointed by the Caliphan Hall meeting of the Committee of One Hundred and Fifty.

It is understood that both Mr. Murphy and Mr. Phelan are willing to be talked of as candidates. Friends of each are "sounding" public sentiment to-day on their candidacies.

James J. Storrow, who says he would heed the call of a body representative of all classes to run for Mayor, has also acceded to the request of Committee of One Hundred representatives that the presentation of his name to the committee be approved by him.

It was said to-day that the name of some big Republican would also be included in the "one or more" candidates whose names the Committee of Nine will present a week from to-day to the full Committee of One Hundred and Fifty, which by then will have grown to a Committee of Seven Hundred and Fifty.

Republicans Want Bangs.

Francis R. Bangs, lawyer, friend of Theodore Roosevelt and former member of the Board of Aldermen, is the Republican desired as a "mentioned" by the Committee of One Hundred folks. Bangs himself is not anxious to run. He was usually direct the movements of the Republican organization in Boston until Bangs's rule.

Police Commissioner Stephen O'Meara is said to be another Republican whom the Committee of One Hundred would like to include in their list of approved candidates. The commissioner, it is said, is less anxious to run than Mr. Bangs is.

The leaders of the Committee of One Hundred who admit that they favor Mr. Storrow more than any other man as a candidate for Mayor were given a slight shock to-day by volunteer gum-shoe men who brought in the news that "State street is said to be ardent for Storrow as it might be."

Some of Mr. Storrow's closest friends said to-day that they have known all along that State Street was "a bit off." The reason, they said, is that Mr. Storrow hasn't yet announced his candidacy in earnest that would bar a later statement that he was never in the race.

Men who are watching the mayoralty race closely—and that means almost everybody—remarked to-day that the visits by Committee of One Hundred people to Messrs. Phelan and Murphy were made at about the same time that the rumor of State Street's ardour was circulated.

To Confer with Party Chiefs.

The Sub-Committee of Nine selected at the meeting of Boston's new municipal party organization, the Committee of One Hundred is to-day arranging for conferences with the working committees of the dominant parties, also following the meeting of the committee, the names of more than one prospective candidate for mayoralty honors will be submitted to the general committee although the sub-committee is admittedly very friendly to the proposed candidacy of James Jackson Storrow.

SALVATIONISTS FIGHT ORDERS HALTING WORK

Because of the demand that the names of some twenty thousand persons be printed and that a detailed account of all moneys collected be furnished and also because of the right to make public collections on the three alighs before the feasts is refused the Salvation Army's Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners, which gladden each year the hearts of so many, may this year be sorry affairs. The Volunteers of America have been even harder hit, as they have been refused the right to make any public collection whatever.

The Salvation Army and the Overseers of the Poor at loggerheads. Following the decision of Police Commissioner O'Meara about a year ago that the Salvation Army and the Volunteers of America had no right to make public collection of funds on the streets and public places without legal permission, a bill was passed by the Legislature last June placing such collections under the regulation of the Overseers of the Poor, with discretionary power in the hands of the police commissioner.

The Overseers of the Poor have recently held many meetings, and at some of them the Salvation Army officials were present with their attorney, Charles J. Flagg, of the Tremont building.

Night Collections Barred.

A few days ago it was announced that the overseers would allow the Salvation Army to make collections before Thanksgiving and Christmas. Colonel Adam Gifford, local head of the Salvation Army, was asked to submit to the Overseers of the Poor a list of the places where he wanted his collectors to stand and the desired hours of collection.

Colonel Gifford asked permission for twenty-six collectors, naming the dates for collection as from November 8 to 24, and from December 8 to 24. The hours he wanted to be from 9 a. m. until 5 p. m., except on the three days before each feast, when the hours were to be from 9 a. m. until 10 p. m.

William P. Fowler, chairman of the Overseers of the Poor, sent Colonel Gifford word that no night collecting were to be tolerated, that the collections must stop each day at 5 and that the Salvation Army must furnish a detailed account of the expenditure of money together with a printed list of the names and addresses of all persons who are given aid in any way from these funds.

Last year 2,500 children were given Thanksgiving dinners, 2,000 persons Christmas dinners, 5,000 little ones were given toys and 12,000 Christmas dinners were sent out to needy families. Officials of the Salvation Army will not accept these terms. That much is known, although Colonel Gifford refuses to make any statement about the rulings of the Overseers of the Poor.

1915 LECTURER HITS EMPLOYER

Big corporations which employ children in mills and factories were arraigned to-day by Everett P. Lord, secretary of the New England Child Labor Committee, in a return at the 1915 exhibition in the Old Art Museum. He spoke on "Sacrificing Children on the Altar of Industry."

The speaker told of his personal experiences in the mill cities of Massachusetts and of how he had found thousands of children, who ought to be at school, working ten and more hours a day in mills. He laid the blame for such conditions on the employer.

Two other lectures are given to-night, Professor Francis G. Peabody of Harvard lectures on "The resources of Harvard's Social Union," and the Baroness Posse on "The Influence of Physical Training on the Welfare of the Nation." The latter speaker is at the head of the Posse Gymnasium.

He said to-day: "Both of our steam fighters are sunk, but I think we can raise the Potomac and repair her on the spot. We will salvage the machinery on the other one and put it in a new hull. We will resume work. Captain Sorensen has the government contract to build the Cape Cod canal breakwater.

FOSS PROMISE TO UNION KEPT

Eugene N. Foss, the candidate for Lieutenant-Governor on the Democratic ticket, has kept his promise made to organized labor, for to-day when he let the contract for the erection of a big garage at Commonwealth avenue and Beacon street, he had the contractor sign a clause stipulating that "none but union labor shall be employed, working union hours and receiving the union rate of union wages," that insures steady work for not less than 100 union men for the next five months.

Mr. Foss has also pledged his word to union labor that none but union workmen shall be employed on the great cotton mills he intends to erect in East Boston, where 2,000 men will be given employment for almost a year.

It was because of Mr. Foss's pledges before the recent election that the Board of Adjustment of the Building Trades' Section of the Boston Central Labor Union voted to endorse his candidacy for Lieutenant-Governor.

Mr. Foss's return to the Secretary of State shows that he had paid out $39,757.82 as campaign expenses.

BIG STORE MEN HEAR SHELDON

"Salesmen are the hardest thing to find. If you can't find them make them. Pay attention to the human plan and cultivate it. It is all rot to say that salesmen are born not made. Salesmanship is the power of persuasion which comes from heart, body, faith, courage, memory and judgment in a man. Since anyone can something of each of these it can be developed to a marked degree."

This was the message of Arthur Frederick Sheldon, president of the Sheldon School of Chicago, last night to the members of the New England Dry Goods Association at their annual banquet in Ford Hall, Ashburton place, and it came in earnest and wide-spread discussion among them to-day. Mr. Sheldon said, in part:

"To violate enduring laws of success means failure as to violate enduring laws of health means death. For instance, an employe is late in the morning. He's looking at the clock to see if the hand is near 8 o'clock. He goes home after that hour. He puts more time in on social pleasure than in development of his business training. Then he's later the next morning and so on and so on. Then he's fired. He calls that hard luck.

"Education means to draw out the positive qualities of success. There are four branches of education, prenatal, elementary, scholastic and last but not least the grand old school of life. The last is oftentimes better than the other three combined. Three static forces are ability and reliability and endurance, when with the dynamo force action make for success."

URGE LABOR UNIONS UNITE

TORONTO, Nov. 10.—Closer relationship between the trade union organizations of the United States, Canada and the United Kingdom was advocated in the convention of the American Federation of Labor here to-day in the reports of the federation delegates to the British Trades Union Congress and the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress. John P. Frey of the moulders, B. A. Larger of the garment workers and Jerome Jones of the typographical union respectively. The reports were referred to committee.

A shadow was cast over the convention to-day by President Gompers's announcement that Earle H. Russ, representing Federal Labor Union No. 24,445, Niagara Falls, N. Y., had been found dead in his room late last night. Death was caused by asphyxiation due to a defective gas fixture. The delegates stood for one minute with bowed heads.

340 RELEASED IN QUARANTINE

Dr. Paul Carson, the port physician, today made another examination of the 1,200 steerage passengers on the Canopic, among whom one suffering from smallpox had been found when she ship docked Monday. All are well and he turned over to Commissioner Billings 340 Portugese passengers who had boarded the vessel at the Azores and who had been quarantined in the forward compartment of the steerage. The doctor is now examining all the other steerage passengers and he is allowing all to land who have had smallpox or who have recently been successfully vaccinated.

BONINSEGNA TO SING AIDA IN SECOND OPERA PERFORMANCE TONIGHT

The second performance at the new Boston Opera House will be given tonight when Verdi's well-known and always popular opera, "Aida," will be sung. The cast will be an entirely different one from that at the opening on Monday night.

The Aida will be Celestina Boninsegna. Director Russell declares that she is one of the finest singers he ever heard in this part.

The contralto part of Amneris will be sung by Maria Claessens, who has sung in Boston before with the San Carlos Opera Company some years ago. She has a magnificent voice.

Betty Freeman, a Boston girl, who has been studying abroad for some years, will sing the part of the Priestess.

The tenor will be Enzo Leliva, a young Italian, of whom great things are promised. George Baklanoff, the Russian bari tone, will sing the part of Amonasro.

After hearing him sing on the opening night, a distinguished critic declared that Baklanoff was the finest baritone he had heard in twenty years.

Francis Archambault, the famous bosso, will make his debut in Boston tonight in the part of Il Re. He is known as one of the finest bassos in Europe. Mardones, the Spanish bass singer, will sing the part of Ramfis. The ballet will also appear tonight's performance. Conti will conduct.

A number of minor changes in the arrangements which were inevitable will be made for tonight, and the performance of singers and orchestra should be more finished than on the first night, when no one knew the acoustics of the new opera house.

As a result of the confusion over the carriage arrangements on the opening night, the carriage regulations have been changed and are now as follows:

"The Huntington avenue entrance to the opera house is intended for the use of those coming to and leaving the building in private vehicles, and on foot. Private vehicles will approach the opera house from the west.

"All public carriages will enter Opera place from St. Stephens street, unloading and loading and pass out of Opera place at Huntington avenue, turning easterly.

"Near the close of the performance all public vehicles should take their position on St. Stephens street as follows: Boston Cab Company on the opera house side west of Opera place; Kenney & Clark on the opera house side east of Opera place; Motor Taxi Company on the north side of St. Stephens street, east of Opera place; all other vehicles will take position on the north side of St. Stephens street, west of Opera place."

The Story of To-night's Opera

"AIDA"

In Italian; an opera in four acts, by Verdi.

Aida	Celestina Boninsegna
Amneris	Maria Claessens
A Priestess	Betty Freeman
Radames	George Baklanoff
Il Re	Francis Archambault
Amonasro	George Baklanoff
Ramfis	Alessandro Mardones
A Messenger	Ernesto Giacone
	Grand Corps de Ballet.
Musical Director	Arnaldo Conti
Ballmaster-General	Baltheo Menotti

"Aida" is one of the most popular operas in existence. The public likes it and demands it, and no opera troupe could get along without it in its repertory. The wonderful melodies which run through it, the beautiful and deeply colored orchestration, the romantic setting and martial ardor all combine to endear it to the opera going public.

The action of "Aida" takes place in ancient Egypt at a time when Ethiopia was engaged in a death struggle with the Kingdom of Ethiopia. It would be hard to set a finger on the exact date of this warfare in history, but it serves admirably for an opera.

The scene opens in Memphis, the palace of the king. Aida, daughter of Amonasro, King of Ethiopia, was made captive by the Egyptians and given as a slave by the Pharaoh to his daughter Amneris. The two girls become friends.

Amneris being Radames, a young captain in the king's guards and, in time opera, fashion, so falls in love with Aida. Princess Amneris suspects that he has overlooked the mistress for the maid and sweetly vengeance.

In the meantime the Ethiopians swarm into Egypt and, by strategy of Thebes, Radames, in a wonderful scene, is appointed by the fickle leader of the Egyptian army and sets forth.

Aida is heartbroken because on one side is her father and on the other her lover.

Girl's Father a Captive.

During the first act occurs the famous processional, the tenor "Celestial Aida" and the splendid chorus "Up the Nile." The choice of priestesses in this act is very effective.

In the second act occurs the return of Radames at the head of the victorious army with a long train of prisoners. The triumphal march in this scene is familiar to all music lovers. Aida, who with Amneris and the Pharaoh are awaiting the victors, recognizes her father among the captives.

She pleads with Radames for the lives of the prisoners and against the wishes of the priests the King grants Aida's request, but refuses to release Amonasro, although he is not recognized as King of Ethiopia, is known to have great influence among the captives.

The captive king sees in the love of Radames and Aida an opportunity as regards his kingdom. He sets Aida to work to persuade Radames to fly from Egypt with her and join the Ethiopians. Radames consents.

Girl in Tomb to Die.

The Pharaoh had given Amneris to Radames a bride because of his victory. Amneris and Ramphis, the High Priest, overhear the conspiracy and Radames is condemned.

He is sentenced to be buried alive, and although Amneris offers him his life, if he will renounce Aida, he refuses. The last act is famous. It shows a broad floor, above the temple of Vulcan, and Aida and Radames is consigned.

As the priests lower the marble slab into place Radames discovers that Aida has hidden herself there to be with him. Amneris above falls in a frenzy of grief on the marble slab.

Among the more famous airs in the latter part of the opera are "O, Sides Vergine," by Aida. Vince Again Shall Thou, Amonasro and Aida, "Ah, Fly From Where," Aida, "To Die, So Pure and Lovely," Radames.

ELY CENTRAL BUBBLE BLOWS UP ON CURB

Ely Central, the mining stock which has been boomed lately by a ring of New York curb brokers, headed by George Graham Rice, went to smash today on the Boston curb as the result of the exposure of the character of the proposition and the men who are booming its stock.

Until the exposure Rice and his friends, who held options on 350,000 shares of the stock and boomed its sale as a great "buy" in the newspapers, had been selling at $4 a share, with flattering promises that it would go much higher. Today on the Boston curb Ely Central opened at 1¾, and finally fell to ¾, or 75 cents a share, at noon. Trading on the stock was quiet here in Boston, every one wanting to sell the stock.

The Engineer and Mining Journal declares that the Ely Central property is practically worthless, and says that Rice and his associates bought up a majority of the stock for 50 cents a share and began a newspaper campaign which made the stock sell.

Nat Goodwin, the actor, who has been engaged in booming mining stocks for the past few years, has been an associate of Rice and appears as president of the brokerage house headed by Rice. Goodwin and Rice were also together in the Rawhide Coalition campaign.

BLIND 23 YEARS, KNIFE GIVES SIGHT

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 10.—After twenty-three years of blindness, during which time she struggled against overwhelming odds to save money for an operation that would restore her sight, Miss Lottie Sheldon of Mt. Pleasant has been successfully operated upon at the Homeopathic Hospital, and for the first time in her life today looked out upon the blue sky and the beauties of nature. The girl was born with congenital cataracts. Year after year she did the toughest kind of housework, till at twenty-three she had enough money.

'DR.' HILL'S CONFESSION MAY CAUSE ARREST OF ANOTHER AS ACCESSORY

ternoon. District Attorney Swift will move for his sentence to-morrow.

The missing hand of the brutally treated girl, found where it had been flung by Hill, did not disclose anything that established how the girl died except that there was no indication of a struggle, because the hand had not been dismembered.

Hill Sticks to Story.

The doctors and the police believe that this condition of the head shows that chloroform, or some other powerful anesthetic was administered to the girl by Hill, and that she died as a result. It was pointed out to Hill by his lawyers that the public and the court would generally not believe his story that the girl had died as the result of her own act in his office, but he stoutly maintained that he had told the truth.

"Do you want me to die about it?" Hill asked.

There was talk today that an arrest might be made as an accessory. It was said that this arrest might be made as the result of information given by Hill in his statement.

The Confession.

Hill's confession, as read to the court by Attorney Higgins, is as follows:

"On Thursday, October 8, Herbert Mountrose, a letter carrier, came to my store and said: 'Hill, I know of a little girl that is in trouble, and I want to get her out of it. Suppose I send her to you. What will it cost?'

"I answered 'one dollar.'

"Mountrose then said: 'I will give her a card to present wrapped up in paper, and when she comes she will give it to you and you will then know she is the girl I send.' He then went away.

"On Friday, when passing by my store, Mountrose said to me: 'I gave her a dollar and she is coming to see you.' That night she called and called.

"The next morning at about 11:40 she came into my store, and gave me the card, pencil, and I said: 'You are Mountrose's friend,' and she said 'Is this the doctor's office?'

"My confession then recites the conversation between Hill and the girl relating to her condition, and the subsequent criminal visit, as a result of which Hill says he told her: 'I can do nothing for you.'

The confession then details the further talk he had with his visitor bearing on her case, the outcome of which was that he reiterated to her what he had already said that he could do nothing. The statement continues:

"I then said: 'I will see the letter carrier again and see if he will give me more money so that I can go to East Douglas.'

Refused the Case.

"I saw Monroe later, about 12:15, and he asked me if she had called. I replied, 'Yes, but I would have nothing to do with her for a thousand dollars.'

"About 1 o'clock she returned to my store, and I said to her: 'Hello, back again?' She answered, 'Yes, my friend got me into a nice mess.'

"I asked her, 'What are you going to do with it, now that you have it?' and she said that she wanted to try and see if.

Hill then relates a discussion that followed, in which he absolutely declined to do it, that it worried and she finally declared that in that case she would take poison and "end it all."

The confession then gives a graphic description of what transpired in the back room of the store, as a consequence of the girl getting on this reckless determination.

"She collapsed," continues the confession, "I thought she had fainted. I threw water in her face, rubbed her hands and put ammonia under her nostrils for her to inhale. For over two hours I worked over her trying to revive her. It was unsuccessful, and I found that she was dead, but when her body commenced to grow cold I knew I must be so.

In a Frenzy of Fear.

"I was afraid to call a doctor or the police. In my frenzy my first and only thought was to conceal the fact that she died out in my store. I was in such a distracted state of mind over the awful situation which I found myself in that I completely lost my head and acted on the first impulse, which was to remove the evidence of the crime as quickly as I could by any means possible.

"In my desperation, and without giving further thought to the consequences, I decided to dismember the body, first removing the clothes from it in frantic haste. This was easily decided. Grabbing the knife I had in the store I amputated the girl's hand at the wrist. I did not realize that I had made a terrible mistake in leaving the hand on the body, but therefore was nothing for me to do but to finish cutting it off and put it under the counter in the rear of the body.

"I didn't stop until the dismemberment was complete. I placed all the several portions, with the exception of the hand, in a large box and box. These were subsequently found by the police and others.

"After completely washing the floor of the room, I hired a horse and buggy at the livery stable on Bowdoin square and, containing the remains in 2 small trunks to the depot, I checked them to Hartford and Northampton. I then went to my home, where I was unable to say exactly what other course I took or just where I threw the pieces of the body and limb, having disposed of those I drove back to the livery, returned the carriage to the stable and went to my home.

Disposing of the Head.

"Saturday morning I went down to my store and washed the floor again. About 10 o'clock I purchased a box at a fruit car and went to Tiverton. I had a basket and a bundle which contained the girl's clothes. I went to a saloon near the line and bought half a dozen bottles of beer, which I put in the basket.

"Then I started down State avenue. I took the wrapping paper from the clothes and threw them in the bushes, where they were later discovered. The girl's head was in a basket and the two rings the girl had worn I dropped in a small hole in the ground close to an old building on State avenue near the line between Tiverton and Fall River and 12 o'clock I returned to the city on a street car.

"That night (Saturday) about 9:30 I took the head, wrapped in a black skirt which the girl had worn, and went up Bedford street to a point near the switch at the foot of the hill leading down from St. Patrick's Cemetery. There I threw the head into the bushes on the east side of the street and went home.

"The following day the girl brought to my store and with which she caused her death I broke up and threw down the toilet."

MAKE CHARGES TO OUST PEARY

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Charges have been made against Commander Peary by Henry W. Wack, attorney for Frederick A. Cook, in a letter to the AMERICAN. Mr. Wack accuses Peary's agents of spying on Cook, of having his footsteps dogged, of using undue and dishonest methods to discredit him unfairly, despicable methods, Mr. Wack said:

"Within a week such charges will be made against Peary to the Navy Department as to force his dismissal. Cook is not concerned about this, but his friends are. For twenty-four years Peary has been connected with the Naval Bureau; for twenty-one years he has been on leaves of absence.

"Cook has told me, and demonstrated to me, that Peary could have got to the Pole eleven years ago if he had so desired. But to keep on trying, getting nearer and nearer, he could come back to civilization every year or so and pose as a hero, lecture to crowds and throw out his chest as the only real polar explorer."

FIFTEEN RESCUED IN DORCHESTER FIRE

Fifteen people, men, women and children, were driven to the street in their night clothes during a fire in the three-story wooden dwelling at No. 96 Erie street, Dorchester Centre early today. The timely discovery of the fire by Patrolman John Fox of the Court square station undoubtedly saved their lives.

Assisted by Patrolmen Fox and McNulty the occupants of the building stag gered and stumbled through the hallway and down over stairs filled with dense smoke and reached the street in a dazed condition. Fox was almost overcome by the smoke while carrying two children from the burning building.

Y.M.C.A. FUNDS NEARING GOAL

The building fund campaign committees of the Y. M. C. A. at Newton and Quincy are working hard to-day, the last of the ten reports of which them to come in amounts required. The Newton committees have turned in contributions and pledges aggregating $11,000, and Quincy is confidence to be secured to-day is $19,987. The Quincy committee has a dinner at the Quincy Adams and night. Each committee is hopeful of receiving the full amount.

The campaigners in Chelsea have yet seven days in which to raise $25,000. They set out to raise $60,000 in ten days. The efforts of the great majority are such as to make financial campaigning more difficult in Chelsea than elsewhere in this vicinity. Ex-Governor John D. Long, chairman of the committee, says that outside help must be had. F. Murray & Bros. have given a pledge of $5,000 conditional upon the rest of the amount needed being raised by midnight of the 16th inst.

The trustees of the Boston State Hospital with the approval of the Governor and Council, have purchased a block of land containing about 20,000 square feet, on Fenwood road and Vilas street, and will erect thereon the new hospital for the first care and observation of mental patients and the study of short treatment and clinical teaching of mental diseases. This makes another important addition to the medical group in this neighborhood. The title was made by Joseph Balch of the Exchange Building.

HARVARD PLAYERS ARE IN PRIME CONDITION TO TACKLE DARTMOUTH

Harvard's football prospects have brightened perceptibly as a result of the improvement in the practices and the return of the cripples to the lineup. With the exception of Bob Brown and Hooper, Harvard's hospital list has been wiped clean and the Crimson's lineup against Dartmouth Saturday will be practically the lineup for the Yale game also.

In the practices so far this week Harvard has improved wonderfully in fielding the ball and O'Flaherty has returned to his old form in the drop kicking department. It is understood that the Crimson coaches are working out a number of new plays with the purpose of diverting attention from Fish who seems to be too closely watched to suit them.

The prevailing opinion is that Harvard will defeat Dartmouth Saturday by a score of 6 to 0. This score is based largely on the showing that the Green made against Princeton last Saturday which is thought to show that the Dartmouth eleven has great playing powers and have been more or less underrated this season, despite the fact that the delay in arriving at Princeton put most of the Dartmouth players on their nerve and this was their main resource in the game with the Orange and Black. The Granite Staters were well able to come back at the attack of their opponents and not only held the Princetonians on several occasions but were themselves able to push through for a score.

Harvard Has Much to Learn.

Harvard still has a great deal to learn in the way of developing a more open style of play. Both Brown and Hooper were able to make great gains through the Princeton line, unmarked.

Another matter in which the Crimson is still conspicuously weak is in the legal use of hands. Of the Harvard backs only Brown and Frothingham know how to work the straight arm to perfection.

The hold of the registers in the Harvard lineup on their positions has been shown by the recent games and practices to be extremely insecure. Provided the remaining have been virtually ousted from their positions at left and right guard by the superior showing of Lothrop, Wilmington, and Fisher. Dunlop's chief difficulty seems to be that he has not shown himself amenable to discipline and coaching this season.

There has been little active betting on the Dartmouth game yet and money from Hanover is not coming to Boston as it usually does. This may be due to the fact that the well known centre for betting has received a hint from the police to cut it out.

At Odds Over Officials.

Harvard and Yale are still at odds over their officials for November 29. A few weeks ago it seemed well understood that the captains and coaches had agreed on all the officials except the referee, two of these officials chosen being E. G. Hall for field judge and W. H. Edwards for umpire.

Saturday at New Haven Coach Haughton of Harvard, who saw Yale play Brown, endeavored to come to some understanding with the Yale men regarding the referee. Harvard all along has wanted Langford, and Yale has wanted Eckersall.

The Yale men said that they could not settle the question of referee until Mr. Camp returned to-day from the West, where he had gone to see University of Michigan play; and they also said that if any agreement had been made for the appointment of Edwards as umpire, such an agreement was unauthorized.

DARTMOUTH GETS COACHES GLAZE AND JENNINGS

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 10.—Fred A. Jennings, '00, of Boston, and John A. Glaze, '98, for years Exeter coach, have been added to the list of alumni coaches for the Dartmouth team. Glaze got on to tugs in the field and took hold of the ends and tackles.

Captain Fallon spent a good deal of the afternoon trying place kicking behind the line. He was fairly successful, and from indications will develop to an extent that will make him a dependable man from kick to the position within the scoring zone.

Ralph Sleeper is confident of his ability at drop-kicking, and got some nice ones over the bar from various distances and angles.

The coaches are still working on Marks as a punter, and have reason to expect something of the sort Saturday unless he is called upon to do the kicking. However, Ingersoll, who in two years on the team will probably be the man to do most of the kicking, both of the long and short varieties.

Every attention is being paid to Pichon in the hope that he will be able to play against Harvard Saturday. Just now it is not possible to say whether or not his injuries are so serious as to preclude any possibility of his playing. Dr. Dudley says that Pichon was not out to-day in uniform and probably will not be able to get out to-day.

JOY AT YALE OVER THE ARRIVAL OF FRANK HINKEY

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 10.—This is eventful day in Yale's football training for Frank Hinkey, "the silent captain," has arrived. Walter Camp, too, returned from Michigan, where he went last week for the big game.

"Billy" Bull is also here to put the finishing touches on the Yale eleven for the big game. "Tom" Shevlin, Rare Chan, Hinkey's former captain; Pat Glynn and "Pud" Stillman have reached town in time to see the last practice of the Blue and Gray of the field goal. Then there were Reginald Bush and Carl Blanders from the regular coaches, Howard Rowe and Wheaton.

Hinkey was at the field yesterday for a short time every day and will be on the field every note of the players. While he was up the question of directing the generalship of the players, but his coaching will be confined to the line. He will watch the coaches the players, especially the ends, for in a great schedule of Head Coach Rowe and Jones and Captain Coy, and they were called to see him on the field.

Dr. Bull paid especial attention to Coy and Johnson and showed both of the same general attack drop kicking. The varsity were given a hard scrimmage with the Hook Scrubs. There was a forty-minute performance against the scrub team, in which the varsity quickly tested both their defense and offense.

NO MORE FOOTBALL AT NEWBURYPORT

That football will be abandoned at Newburyport High School for the rest of the season is most probable now that the parents of the players have taken a hand in the matter, which was brought about by the conduct of the game on Saturday last with Lynn.

The team went to Ipswich and defeated the high school there on Saturday by a score of 48 to 0, and after the contest some members of the team were taken by the coach and athletic warning apparel, the property of the high school, which they have been found in their dress suit cases.

BATTLING NELSON SAYS WALSH WON

By BATTLING NELSON.
Lightweight Champion of the World.

Last night at the Armory A. A. Jimmy Walsh and Tommy O'Toole fought a twelve-round draw. I am sorry that I couldn't stay to see the finish as, from what I could hear of the decision, it was a bit hard on the Boston favorite to get only a draw. Directly after the sixth round I was compelled to leave the club house to go to the Columbia Theatre, where I am doing my little boxing stunt every afternoon and evening with the best local boys to be had.

Here is how I figured the fight up to the end of the sixth round. The first round was slightly in favor of Walsh. The second round, I believe, was even, but Walsh won all by himself. He used the "famous Canale left shift" to good advantage.

Walsh's work in the third round with the Canale shift" I know what I am talking about because I stopped one in San Francisco, the time I knocked Martin out in the fourteenth round. It made me feel fully three minutes from the effect.

This is the round where Walsh did some clever shocking and shaking up of one of O'Toole's futile rushes. Both O'Toole's eyes were puffed at the end of round and his mouth was bleeding freely. The fourth round of this round O'Toole was palpably in distress from the hard shooting he received and he rather welcomed the sound of the gong.

From what I heard of the last six rounds I am at a loss to know how Walsh only received a draw. In the tenth he banged O'Toole to the boards for the ninth, in the twelfth and last lap Walsh was tearing in.

The referee, Dick Flemming, has a few things to learn about the game. In the first place he should never allow both of the fighters and pull them apart as he did last night.

Well, just to express myself on the Max Baker-George Ashe eight round draw. It was a fairly good night and a good decision, although Baker had a slight shade but not enough to win.

Ed Sherlin won all he himself in his eight round tilt with Tom Bergin. The referee of the night was how Bergin took the punishment he did, and still fighting hard at the end. Sherlin in my opinion is a comer, and, under the good management he has now, is sure to make a name for himself in the ring, the most popular and manly of all sports.

On one occasion in San Francisco I had the opportunity of witnessing Jimmy Walsh and Jimmy Reagan, although Walsh won easily, I failed to see any real fighting ability in his make-up. Last night he appeared to have improved a hundred per cent. Possibly he is like whiskey; the longer it improves with age.

I just want to put in a compliment to the management of the Armory A. A. They certainly have a great club, and Boston is one of the best boxing cities in the country. Boston is one city that is sure equal to any of the fighters that come here. Reading the papers I see that the Coast is getting a good judge of distance, and a fair hitter in a nutshell he looks the goods. He is fast, shifty and has a left hook that is staged him for this afternoon. To-night I meet Matt Baker and Thursday I meet Ed Sherlin, a little scraper. Eddie Sherlin and Jimmy Quinlin for ten rounds each, so as to give the local public a chance to see their boys in action.

Thursday night is the real night, as I have invited all the members of the Boston Newsboys Union to the Columbia Theatre as my guests. They are to meet at their club house on Washington street at 2 o'clock and at 7:30 they are to parade to the theatre with their brass band leading the delegation.

WALSH SURPRISES FIGHT CROWD BY HIS CLEVER WORK

By I. S. CLARK.

Jimmy Walsh, the local prodigy in the boxing realm, made the biggest hit of his life in the minds of his admirers last night when he went to a draw decision in twelve rounds with plucky little Quinlan fighter, Tommy O'Toole, at the Armory A. A.

To the wise ones, O'Toole, with his advantage in height, reach and weight, had too many guns for Walsh. That was before the battle started. After it was over there were many who would have given Walsh the decision on the showing in the ring.

If cleverness and scoring a knockdown were the two factors that decided the match, then the spoils belonged to Walsh, as he twice rattled in although flip generality and handling of himself besides nearly winning by a knockout, he put up a hard fight to the mat for the count of nine in the tenth round.

It has been such a long period since Walsh appeared in the ring hereabouts that he took the fans by surprise by his improvement in form and he went out of his way to show at his best against O'Toole, who has lasted all the top boys in the division and featherweight class, therefore being an opponent to show his real worth against and he certainly made good.

Walsh was slow to get started, as O'Toole made the most of his advantage in the early rounds, but the only chance he had to do any execution was at close range, and he inflicted a lot of punishment at close range, appearing to excel Walsh at infighting.

Whether Walsh got up his speed O'Toole had all kinds of trouble escaping his fierce rushes, as he was lucky to come back for a duel with straight lefts, with little advantage. They got tangled up and fell to the mat, rolling over each other. Jimmy gave a hard right swing on the body and O'Toole stabbed with left to the floor. Walsh's round.

ROUND TWELVE—Walsh rushed O'Toole to the ropes and got home with several hard rights. He got a right to the head when he went in again, as he was now obliged to end up the fight. Walsh appeared to be the stronger for the mitting and was away cleverly and kept going to O'Toole, whose rushes lacked the ginger that was noticeable earlier in the bout. Walsh's round.

TO RETAIN ALLSTON GOLF CLUB GROUNDS

At a special meeting of the Allston Golf Club, it was unanimously voted to purchase the club house and grounds on a lease for five years longer of the grounds and club house, which expires next April. Plans are located, and to take such action as is necessary to secure an increased capital for the annual dues, so that the increased rental may be met.

The club has nearly 350 members, of which 237 are active male members. The club is one of the most popular on account of its accessibility, and the social side is also attractive. The club has a full set of all the year round and the club has a bowling team in one of the leading leagues.

SOMERVILLE HIGH LOSES TWO PLAYERS

Somerville High School will be without two of its best players in its league game with Boston English High Saturday at Somerville. Charles Dickerman, the star halfback, and Charles Caldwell, the right guard, are both ineligible. Coach Dickerman did not play in the Dorchester game, but he was expected to play until yesterday was the cause known.

Harold Dickerman has been selected from right guard to right tackle, filling the position vacated by Caldwell. Robert Gale, a big, fast player for Dickerman's place, and he did well in the Malden game.

PROTEST WIN IN VANDERBILT AUTO CUP RACE

By J. C. KERRISON.

The 1909 Vanderbilt cup race is not to go down into history without a protest after all, as the Alco Motor Car Company, entrant of the Atlas car driven by Elmer Knox in the race, made a protest yesterday against the decision of W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., referee of the race, in not making any award in class 2 of the Vanderbilt cup race. The Atlas company sent the following letter to the Motor Cups Holding Company, the promoting organization, yesterday and also mailed a copy of the letter to Hon. Robert Bacon, chairman of the contest board of the American Automobile Association, under whose sanction the race was run.

We hereby enter our formal protest against the decision of your referee, or referees, as published in the New York Sun of November 2, which was our first official notice or information that you had decided not to make an award in class No. 2 in the Vanderbilt cup race.

We claim that the cars having from 301 to 450 cubic inches piston displacement, in which class the Atlas was rated, it was stated in your published decision, that there were two cars when the race was called off. We claim there was only one, and that one the car entered by the Atlas Motor Car Company.

We hereby claim the first position in class No. 2 in the Vanderbilt cup race, and whatever prize or prizes we may be entitled to, we wish to have awarded to us without delay.

In class No. 2 and enclose certified check for $250 as guarantee in case of loss of our claim against decision of referees or referee.

The police officers of Vermont have very little trouble with violators of the motor vehicle regulations, for it was announced at the recent annual meeting of the Automobile Club of Vermont at Montpelier that the State authorities had received only two complaints of violations of the automobile regulations during the last year. The association is to undertake the work of erecting sign posts on a number of the State roads for next season.

F. P. Weber, manager of the Diamond Rubber Company's local establishment, has been at the factories in Akron, Ohio, the past week attending the annual conference of the salesmen of the company. The meeting was a broadening of the Diamond policy of providing unlimited co-operation toward obtaining the greatest degree of the service. A motto over the door reads, "Complete ination always," the watchword, to the essence of the plan.

"In several thousand miles of touring in Europe this year the tires I bought gave me nothing like the service I got with American tires," says H. A. Hoover, a banker in Ipokane. "So long as I had American tires all went smoothly, but when I had to buy foreign tires I found their mileage capacity very much less."

JEFFRIES HOPES FIGHT WILL BE IN CALIFORNIA

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

GOTCH IS STILL THE CHAMPION OF ALL WRESTLERS

THINGS THAT MAY STOP JEFFRIES-JOHNSON FIGHT

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 10.—Are we any nearer the Jeffries Johnson fight than we were?

July of next year is eight months away, and all kinds of accidents and mishaps are likely to occur in two-thirds of a year. Of course, it is something to feel that the men have attached signatures to articles which bind them to fight each other, and it is also something to know that the division of the purse and the length of the bout are matters that have progressed past the wrangling point, but, after all, that long, long stretch of months! If life insurance statistics are worth the paper they are printed on, especially those which refer to the average length of existence in any number of as may not live to see Jeffries and Johnson in action.

Take What You Get.

It is a case of take what you get and be thankful for it, I guess; but it would have been so much nicer if they had fixed an earlier date. We would have been enthusiastic as well as grateful then, but now pessimism will be as much a cancer in the blood.

A fight that is three months away is a dim and distant prospect, whereas one which is dated for eight months hence is such a nebulous proposition that the average mind cannot grasp the situation.

When Jeffries came back he was comparatively a few days ago and said, "I will be ready wherever Johnson wants to," the visions of an early clash. When Johnson, before leaving East, hinted out, "I am tired of Jeffries's dilatory tactics and he will have a fight or get out," we dreamed of an earlier clash still.

Some of us said, "They will be in the ring at Christmas," and others remarked, "then a little too soon."

Now that the men have sat down together and have plaintly agreed that any time during July 4 would suit them, and that July 4 next as sure as the nose is on your face we don't know what to think.

It is all very confusing.

What Will Jeff Do?

Here is Jeffries, who has trained, according to his own statements, for ten months, and who has rid his frame of every atom of grossness. Is he going to hold on to what he has gained for eight months? It is against all the ideas of training belt to ladies to go with the sexes become track-sore and surly and would probably lose every vestige of what he possessed. On the other hand, if it is his purpose to fill out again and then begin training all over a couple of months in advance of the fight, why is he being himself to look like a fighting man at the present juncture?

As for Johnson, it is to invite dizziness to venture up what may happen to him in eight months. To begin with there is the danger of the negro being killed in an automobile accident. If that happens he will have been arrested so often for speeding that delay will not be considered as corrective any longer and he may be serving a term in jail.

Will It Be the Footlights?

There is also a chance that Johnson may stack up against some tough and crafty thirdrate heavyweight and have several dents put in his reputation before July rolls around.

Away down at the bottom of the report of the proceedings in New York is a gentle insinuation that Jeffries and Johnson will appear in some easy money by travelling the footlight route between now and July. Of course there is no inference that they will double up, but that they will travel different routes. But are these preposterous stage engagements the joker in the provisional agreement that sets the date of the fight eight months ahead? If it is, when the posters begin to appear on the theatrical dead-walls, the public will feel like the fellow who kicked the bat with a brick in it last April Fools' Day.

M'INTOSH WANTS TO GET FIGHT FOR AUSTRALIA

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Though Hugh D. McIntosh, the renowned Australian promoter, is the latest addition to the list of bidders for the Jeffries-Johnson fight, the retired heavyweight champion is hopeful that some California promoter may land the attraction. McIntosh called yesterday and his representative left no stone unturned with a bid at the proper time, intimating that Jeffries, Gleason, Tex Rickard et al would have to go some to cheat the Australian out of the fight.

The success of the Burns-Johnson fight at Sydney, Australia, last Christmas proves that McIntosh can, with safety, make the most stupendous purse of ring history if he is anxious for the attraction as he appears.

It is not merely a question of sentiment with Jeffries that prompts his favoring California for the fight, but the fact that he can re-establish the supremacy of the white race by once more trying to regain the championship. If the fight is held in California the big fellow will be able to do all his training on his alfalfa ranch at Norman-Call. Burbank lies in the San Fernando valley, only ten miles from Los Angeles, and it is Jeff's private property he will be able to secure at least the tone of privacy he desires.

Jeffries ranch life appeals most strongly. Of a retiring disposition, he would here be able to alleviate the annoyance of an ever-enthusiastic following. Being of the open life, of his days in the horses. He knows the advantage of home surroundings in such a fight, and profited before him until he can sit himself to the old form he must show before he can hope to cope with the black champion. All his own home Jeffries will find the prospect very favorable for rounding himself into perfect condition. He is used to every whim of climate in the San Fernando valley. The water there agrees with him perfectly. He is thoroughly familiar with the lay of the land in his native haunts and could there do the necessary work to best advantage.

$10,000 GIFT IF JEFF MEETS AL KAUFMAN

William A. Brady, who formerly managed James J. Jeffries, makes an offer to give the retired heavyweight champion $10,000 as a gift if he will fight "Al" Kaufman within ninety days.

Brady, who has had a serious falling out with his old protege, has said time and again that he believed Kaufman could beat Jeffries, and to give evidence of the sincerity of his opinion offers the money. The former and the latter after his long retirement Brady posted $10,000 with Max Dimenstal, to be given to Jeffries with no string whatsoever attached if he will go ten rounds against Kaufman.

No stipulation is made as to the event of Jeffries being beaten. Under the agreement, which was made with Jeffs James, Jeffries is to get the sum merely for going into the ring against Kaufman. All the conditions are to be left to Jeffries. If the said champion so elects the bout may be held in private, public or any place that Jeffries may name.

In addition to the $10,000 which Brady is willing to give Jeffries to get into the ring with Kaufman, the ex-ten-round is also posted $1,000 to go as a forfeit for a side bet of $5,000 that Kaufman will be the victor if the fight is held. Issues covered this angle, taking the Jeffries end. Furthermore, Brady bet $4,000 to $5,000 with Dan Hickey that Kaufman will defeat Max Bloxenthal in the stakeholder for the wager.

After the offer had been made by Brady Tuesday night to see Jeffries at the Plaza Hotel, and he could him that if he was in any way close to make the match, $10,000 would be his absolutely. Lannin told Brady "Jeff" that he would post the additional $10,000 for Jeff's benefit, and that he could beat Kaufman he would get at least $20,000 for his share.

Providing the bout be held in public and not private, or any place in the U. S. that is arranged will be Jeffries's, with no manager's percentage.

When "Jeff" was asked what he thought of the offer he said: "It is as well that it looks suspicious. Everyone knows Brady's nibble for me. I will give no answer before Monday this afternoon."

GOTCH WINS IN TWO FALLS

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—Frank Gotch, champion wrestler of the world, defeated Giovanni Relevitch of Italy at Dexter Park arena in two straight falls, the first in 6 minutes 28 seconds and the second in 5 minutes and 28 seconds.

The match was at catch-as-catch-can. Gotch won the first fall with a crotch and barearm hold. The Italian gave a fine exhibition of wrestling skill, but the champion was too agile and strong for him. Gotch had his famous toehold on the foreigner four or five times, but Relevitch resisted it successfully, the crowd giving a tumultuous cheer when Gotch changed his tactics.

In the second fall Gotch pinned his antagonist to the mat with a cross leg hammer and wrist-lock hold. Before the match Donald Mainland, whom Gotch defeated last year, challenged the winner by wire.

Results of Boxing Bouts

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 10.—Dick Nelson of New York knocked out Joe Marks of New York in the third round. Before the knockout came Nelson had twice floored his man for rights.

Cy Smith, who was to have fought Nelson, was injured in training. Sid Harris of Albany won on a foul from Sid Fleming of Plattsburg in the eighth round.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10.—Willie Lucas had the better of Joe Hirst in the bout in the Quaker City A. C. ring for the all-star show. Hirst used a left lab to the body regularly. Lucas did the leading, his blows being clean and well timed. Hirst's work was one of the fastest witnessed in this city.

MONTREAL, Nov. 10.—Al Greenwood of Pittsburg was knocked out by Tommy Crawford of Fitzroy in the fourth round. The fight was for the middle-weight championship of Canada. Jack Fitzgerald's challenge from Joe Thomas, ex-middle-weight champion of the world.

GOLF GOSSIP OF CLUB NOTES

Miss Dorothy Campbell leaves to-day for her home in North Berwick, Scotland, after a very successful golf season in New York. By winning the golf championships of Great Britain and the United States in the same year she established a most enviable position, so that invitations from all of the leading women players in the Massachusetts, Metropolitan and Philadelphia golfing districts are pouring in each day for a portion of her time. Miss Mary Adams, the Irish champion invited Miss Campbell and the rest of the Scottish players to a luncheon and then took them golfer skating in the St. Nicholas Rink.

Mrs. Irving F. Marshall, wife of the president of the Allentown golf Club, is the woman champion at this course. Mrs. Thomas S. Dee was her opponent in the final and gave her a hard struggle, making her pass on the last hole, which she finally won out by one up. Mrs. Marshall reached the finals by defeating Mrs. Lewis Ruhl Converse and then Mrs. W. L. Crocker, while Mrs. Dee defeated Mrs. C. K. Shirley and Miss Ward.

"Black ballot" doesn't seem to apply to golf as a term of reproach. In spite of the pending situations at Commonwealth however, golfers are playing there nearly every week-days. The home for the Commonwealth Country Club course is the one-time Longfellow Club course, now also new ball. A court of inquiry to the Club Golf Committee will be held driven from the first tee lands on the green. The ball is driven from the first tee every foot, and as it lands down on one of the sloping sides of these holes a great amount of block appears on the ball.

ANOTHER FAST YEARLING.

Another yearling trotter was given a standard record this season, this being Silent Brigade, that trotted in 2:28¾, at Lexington. So easily did he go his mile that his driver was confident he had quite a reserve of speed and tried to induce the owner to start against the world's record of 2:19¼.

STRAIGHT DOPE FOR SPORT FANS

JIMMY WALSH, THE BANTAM CHAMPION, made good last night at the Armory in his bout with Tommy O'Toole, and in the opinion of a large part of the audience should have been given a decision instead of a draw. O'Toole claims to be a feather weight, but can't make 122 ringside, as it must be doped out that the Boston boy went two clashes after his own to get the match. O'Toole is a fast miller, but the only work for which he could be given credit, according to the work it looked from where I sat, was his body punching in clinches. Jimmy out-pointed him more than a million miles in straight boxing, and O'Toole's weight was the only thing that prevented Walsh from scoring a knockout.

A PARTICULARLY OFFENSIVE PERson named Lane created a diversion at the Armory Club ringside last night by his particularly offensive manner. Please note that particularly offensive is used twice. It is necessary for descriptive purposes. The announcement was made from the ring that Pat Nelson, lightweight champion, would defend the title on the bouts for the BOSTON AMERICAN, when this Lane person took it upon himself to call down the announcer in a particularly offensive manner. Nelson stepped over and successful to a marked degree, and Lane was greeted by those in the immediate neighborhood. I may have more to say about Lane in the near future.

THE VICTORY OF FREDDIE WELCH over Johnny Summers in London is of quite a little local interest, as it is one step towards clearing up the muddle as to who is the best boy to try to wrest the lightweight title from Nelson. Bat Nelson he will not fight until next April or May, and suggested that in the meantime Deahler, McFarland, Welch and one or two more of them fight it out along effete nation lines, and he would meet the best boy. Deahler claimed a challenge to him, and if the English champion doesn't come over here soon the Boston boy will journey to the other side for a crack at him. I'VE GOT MYSELF HOOKED IN ON a scrap between two basketball teams and I am going to get out of it right here and stay out. Manager Merrill of the Cambridge Five challenged the Notre Dames advertising a game between the two teams, as no such game was to be played. Manager Curtis of the Notre Dames said he didn't and that it was the Cambridge A. A. that was billed. Manager Merrill brought me some posters, showing that it was the Cambridge Five. Manager Curtis brought me some, showing it was the Cambridge A. A. Somebody is wrong. Somebody is right. I'm sure I don't know, and I'm sure you don't care. Can you beat it?

THERE WILL BE LARGE DOINGS IN Boston town next Friday night when the pad-club chauffeurs give their first annual dance in Corinthian Hall, and if they get real pretty they may have a couple of ringers to blow in and look them over. If they're going to take a look at the register after they have paid their way they'll have to look out before I start. A lady from a mine told a lady friend here that the boys are planning to tour the club door off. I'm going to get someone to whom some new scenery is due and be all set for a plunge, so come along with the invite. I'm strong for these local affairs, and I'm going to see if I can't get them with a whole week's salary. Of course I pass a few blocks, but that was just because he was good natured.

SOMEONE HAD BETTER PAY ATtention to Kid Whitney. That young gentleman from California, or he will be taking a lot of the best of these welterweights into camp. His clean cut victory over Billy Rolfe at the National A. C. makes him look like a comer to a lot of local fans who saw the bout. Whitney is a protege of Sam Langford, who is his manager and handler. Sam thinks enough of the young negro to back him against any welter in the country, and there is a prospect of him getting a chance soon with some of the top-notchers.

LINK PERKINS, HAVERHILL, MASS.—Drop in and see me some time when you are in Boston and I'll look you over and tell you about it. You might have the best part of a chance to make good under the right conditions

HERE MY OLD FRIEND THE football fan back on the job again with games doped out for next Saturday. Let's keep tab on him and see how he comes out:

Armory Club, Boston, November 20.

Dear Sir—Lord, when's been a second league city since the Lowell people dropped it was ever bad. If my luck should repeat last Saturday I'd be broke, but I think. Thanksgiving didn't seem to go to Dartmouth's head any, as we had to go to Princeton to get one, and we all don't become that Yale will lose Princeton, Harvard will trim Dartmouth, November 30. Having fallen, trampled will win. Don't let my luck with the football results cause you to ask individually, because it isn't there and if you should I'd be glad to give you a winner if you can I to 5 scoreless game. Yours truly, JAY.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Dear Sir—Will you kindly inform me if Kid Graham and Jack McCarron ever met in Connecticut? Also has Kid McCoy a decision over Jack Dempsey? Also has Jack Dempsey fought Kindly answer in the Straight Dope column. Yours truly, Corbett Knocked Out Sullivan.

Corbett knocked out John L. Sullivan in five rounds in New York August 30, 1900, the only time they ever met.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Being a reader of your valuable column and also a great admirer of Jeffries I write to ask why not give him an even break in your forecast of the coming battle.

I have followed you as an outsider for a few years myself and find to be perfectly square. Hoping a favorable reply and no one knows Johnson has much confidence. I am yours for Jeffries. Please answer in your column so you know where a letter could be addressed to me.

Thanking you in advance for favors you may do, I remain. CORNELIUS DUGGAN, So. Manchester street, Chelsea, Mass.

Charley Harvey is the manager of Con O'Kelly. A letter addressed to No. 832 Sixth Ave. Thirtieth street, New York, will reach him.

I HAVE IT ON INFORMATION MORE or less reliable that Henry Meese and Young Limerick, who recently gave one of the best boxing exhibitions the Armory Athletic Association has ever put on, are the star attractions at the Apollo Club at Salem next Monday night. If this is right, and I hope you will be there, all of Boston sports will journey to the Witches town to see the bout. They are about the fastest stan bang performers I've seen at work in recent years and are evenly matched to show away above the average.

THERE IS A LETTER IN THIS OFFICE for Mike Sullivan, addressed to the New York Journal, and forwarded from there here.

HEYDLER HAS MADE GOOD AND SHOULD BE ELECTED

The baseball world is witnessing the strange sight just now of a National League president in-mored in the fourteenth year of a Brooklyn administration in New York, a victim of untold schemes to oust him, and with practically no knowledge of what is transpiring.

Such is the situation of John A. Heydler, who was appointed to succeed the late Harry Pulliam. The press and baseball spectators, and C. Webb Murphy, of Chicago, and Charles E. Ebbets, of Brooklyn. The rumor to-day is that no less a personage than the Brooklyn magnate will be put up as be candidate for highest honors in the National League.

Ike Murphy and Chairman Herrmann are looking for a "brand" man to administer affairs in the older organization. John Heydler is all right as he might, apparently, but he only measures some thirty-six inches in chest measurement. Charley Ebbets is decisively more eligible from this standpoint. Standing naturally and, to be sure, always majestically, the Czar of Washington, Ind., would make, at least, one and a half Heydler. Under stress of excitement, as when Our Boys' honor is at stake, the precision of the umpire, the Brooklyn dictator inflates to simply grand proportions and you'd pick him for president of anything.

Recently Murphy and Ebbets have burned up inxinester Jules rippling from the Knickerbocker to the Waldorf, to the National League Club, where Charles P. Taft, brother of the United States President, was stopping. Yes see this president thing has become a mania. Presidents, aspirants and president candidates have the fashion of "presidenes." In fact, Mr. Taft is expanding. Ban Johnson and President Taft are big men. Hermann finds an idea of prosperity—the full dinner pail. Taft's big brother, Judge Hughes has declared for next year with the Republican party. He did not look as though he were well fed. Somewhere between, in the opinion of Murphy and Ebbets, Pat Powers, of the Eastern League, is doing fat. Also clever. Sporting Editor Jim Price, who ran against him, is chin.

Against this sentiment John Heydler has only ability with which to contend. Heydler was an umpire some years ago. He was taken up by Harry Pulliam and for nearly two seasons has capably handled the tremendous volume of business. Heydler is going right along attending to business, though one can see that he is considerably worried over the coils that are being wrapped around him as he sits industriously plodding in the No. 15 Building.

Heydler has the support of Barney Dreyfuss, but if Herrmann, Brush and Ebbets are against him his situation is critical. Brush, sick as he is, came down from the sanitarium last week and took up quarters in the Knickerbocker, where he was visited by Murphy, Ebbets and Taft. He spoke California of his fondness for Heydler. Nevertheless, but would say never a word as to the object of their frenzy. There seems little doubt but that John Kling, billiard master of Kansas City, will be the man in spite of denials. One oldest, any way. Kling got a president favorable to his re-instatement and transferred to Kansas City to another.

Last Summer Ebbets offered $15,000 for Kling, and Murphy, refusing, added that he could get $20,000 for him if he chose to anybody else. Funny game, but! It's a game he no say at all.

Heydler, having no interest in any club, is a proper man for the position. Like Ben Johnson, he decides on the merits of a case as he sees them. It is a stupidly hard position, for the reason that every magnate is trying to make as much money as possible in his separate city. If his club gets punk he roars at the league president, whose property are exempt for the time being from censure. None criticise Heydler. Certainly it would not do to have a club owner in the command, even though he be able as Mr. Ebbets.

BASEBALL NEWS, NOTES

Lost, strayed or stolen—A ball player he name of Hinz, Washington. Said player seen had carelessly left a crack for $833 on a table in the office of the club owner, this amount representing his salary for the last two weeks of the season.

Homer Smoot, the old Red, has been purchased from Toledo by Cincinnati. After a weak throwing arm, Smoot is a star player.

Pitcher Jake Beckley has struck the nonogan good and plenty. Since being released by Boston to him played with three minor league teams, each lower in class than the preceding one.

Third Baseman Johnson, whom Cincinnati was crying out on the Pacific coast, when an American League team grabbed him, has been batting .400 in the regular batsmen in the Pacific Coast League. Another bad tip, eh?

Pitcher Kroh of the Chicago Cubs still lingers in the Windy City. He is trying hard to get a return to one of the fine infield on him by Manager Chance during the past season.

"Dutch" Schaefer, second sacker of the Senators, should go into the detective business with Roger Denman. Injured last summer by a burglar who invaded his Chicago apartments. That puts him in the class of Sam Smith Ralph.

FOOTBALL OF COLLEGES

The telegraphed passes, warped to admirable perfection by the cornell team last Saturday, outwitted the Crimson and netted a gain of one-third of the total field for the Ithacans. Dartmouth has paid especial attention to this play and the work in the Princeton game worked it in the most successful manner.

Yale has followed along the same line as Dartmouth and has developed the open style of play effectively. The Elis also seem to be less liable to an attack of that fatal football malady known as fumbling.

The Crimson seems to have one decided advantage over Yale, that of possessing a harder schedule so far. Some football experts say Yale's defeat by Cornell on last Fall to this fact and predict that it will also have an effect this year.

It has now become the fashion for football men as well as other athletes in Harvard to be up in their studies. Captain Fish of the Harvard team is an excellent student. Burr, the captain of last year's varsity football team, graduated with distinction, receiving the degree of bachelor of arts cum laude. The student council at Harvard has had a large part in promoting this tendency toward higher scholarship.

Danger of a Mother-in-Law in the House

By DOROTHY DIX

THE other day in this column I related the pathetic story of an old woman who was left upon the cold charity of the world because her well-to-do son-in-law refused to either let her live in his house, or to give his wife the money with which to board her mother in some other house.

I told of how the daughter's heart was broken at not being able to provide for her dear old mother, and I expressed the opinion that a man who loved his wife would prove that love by being kind to his wife's people.

A great many of my masculine readers have taken strong exceptions to this article, and I have been bombarded with letters from married men who express in forcible language the opinion that the mother-in-law is the snake in the grass of the domestic Eden, and responsible for breaking up more homes than the Demon Rum and all his satellites.

I will not attempt to deny the truth of my correspondents' allegation. The mother-in-law is often a very trying person and a thorn in the side of her son-in-law.

Undoubtedly she is frequently bossy, opinionated, narrow and prejudiced; but, even so, if she has raised up a good wife for the man, he owes her a debt of gratitude that he should not stickle at paying, even at the cost of some self-sacrifice.

The Mother-in-Law's Rights

Certainly, if the wife's mother is poor, he has no right to keep his wife from dividing what she has with her mother. He should recognize that, although the wife brings in no money to the family purse by her labor at home, she earns money and is entitled to at least enough of it on which to support her mother.

Of all domestic problems, none is more poignant than the mother-in-law question, for it is not to be disputed that the presence of either the husband's mother or the wife's mother in a family is almost certain to be a potent source of discord and bickering. It is a pathetic fact that practically all in-laws hate each other, and that when they are forced to dwell under the same roof they do the best they can to make each other wretched.

In such a condition of affairs both sides are at fault. The young have no patience with the old, and the old are too stiff-necked to conform to the ways of the young, and so the trouble begins.

But the burden of the sacrifice itself should not be laid on the old, when age, misfortune or circumstances force them to live with their in-laws, and I am afraid that old people very seldom realize this, or try to ingratiate themselves with their daughters-in-law or sons-in-law.

It is pretty hard for a mother to recognize just because her child gets married that he, or she, belongs to somebody besides herself, and for this reason the mothers-in-law feel that she has got a better right to decide things for her John, or her Mary, than John's wife has, and Mary's husband.

The young husband, or wife, jealous of his, or her, own authority naturally resents this attitude on the part of the mother-in-law. The mother-in-law perceives this, and yet for the sake of peace she will not deny herself the pleasure of quitting in her car and trying to steer the family boat.

"Hands Off!" a Good Motto

It is a great misfortune for either the man's mother, or the woman's mother, to have to live with a married couple, and unless it is an absolute financial necessity —unless it is the only possible way in which to support the mother-in-law—she should never go to live with her son or her daughter. Let her live under some roof where she can exercise her peculiarities on strangers.

Where, however, a woman has to go to live with her in-laws she should bear in mind that her daughter-in-law has got a perfect right to run her house in her own way, and that her son-in-law has arrived at man's estate and doesn't need her corrections nor advice.

Her motto should be, "Hands Off!" and she should try to realize that the old have a right to take a back seat for the new, and that the views of 1870 no longer prevail now than do the fashions of that time.

Above all, the mother-in-law should never forget that not even a mother has the right to interfere between a husband and wife, and that she can only bring unhappiness upon her own child by causing her son to take sides with her against his wife, or the daughter to espouse her quarrel against her husband.

To-Day's Best Story

A WELL-TO-DO Chinaman living in this country was very friendly with a big city merchant, and on the death of the latter sent a beautiful wreath to his relatives.

Deeply moved by this act, the sister of the deceased forwarded to the Chinaman one of her late brother's pets, a specially fine bull terrier, the winner of several prizes and a remarkable specimen of canine birth and breeding. She thought he would like to have it as a keepsake. The following letter was received in acknowledgment:

"My dear Madam—While tendering my best thanks for sending me your brother's dog, I beg to say that as for myself, I have long since given up the custom of eating dog's flesh, but my attendants, to whom I handed the creature, tell me they never tasted anything so nice. Yours etc.,

LI WON LUNG."

CLOVES FOR MOTHS

Whole cloves have been found most efficacious in destroying those dreadful pests—moths. They are better for this purpose than tobacco or camphor, besides having a much more pleasing odor than the two remedies mentioned.

Profession and Practice By Nell Brinkley

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

When she was "out" of society she told how she would let her friends "in"—

YOU'VE read tales about a fairy who dropped into a poor man's cottage in the howling of a dark, windy night and begged, pretending to be a human, for a bit of bread and a cup of ale to wash it down. And how the poor man would throw up his hands, and show his patches, and open his cupboard to show its bare shelves, and would say, sorrowfully:

"Not a crumb have I, Wayfarer. An' you journey-by again some time, and I have a brew in the pot, I'll fill thee!"

And then the fairy would laugh in his long whiskers and put a scarlet purse into the poor man's hands, saying:

"Here be, friend, two gold coins in this purse, and as fast as thou take them out and spend them, two shall grow in their place. It shall have always in it the good sound of jingling money!"

And then he would take himself off in the wind of the night.

And then one day back would journey the fairy, passing again that way. And you know how it was!

The fairy begged a bit of bread and a draught of ale to wash it down. And the poor man, grown rich and fat and proud, with a big round tummy and pig's eyes and gold thread on his jerkin and a ring on his thumb, would throw up his hands at the very idea and herd the little whiskered man to the door and out into the wind again.

"No ale and white bread for beggars!" quoth he, and returned plously to his fire.

He didn't practice what he professed.

Have you, maybe, ever, ever happened to know a Lady like that?

I'll tell you. One who sighed in the night for the open door of society. And the door stayed fast bolted, and the shining elect inside only leaned out now in a great while, just long enough to make a face at her and cut her cold.

But she spent her days waddling up and down below its battlements, like an anxious, trilling chicken who's been shut out from the coop at twilight and her master's gone to bed! Looking for one little hole next the ground where she could scuttle under.

She made her money shine in the sun to bribe them to haul her in. She dressed like the French villainess in the play! She fevered and snorted and worked like a dray horse, "rushing" herself.

Society was the moon, and the fat baby Lady cried herself scarlet for it!

And she had some pretty friends who looked at it a bit wistfully, too. And to them, over a cup of amber tea, she vowed:

"Cars, my dears, the whole raft. CATS! Why, that creature was my friend, and do you think she'd wiggle one of her perfect fingers to help me in? M-m-no! She whoops by me on the street as if I was shaking a subscription list for the Salvation Army. If that was ME—if I was there, my dears, I'd not forget the people who used to be my friends. But I'll be running over the same cobbles, and I'll meet with that person yet, and when I do I'll pull you up, too. I'm not THAT kind!"

But when she got "in" society old-time friends were strangers to her.

And the "my dears" drink their amber and her tickling words and twinkle and sparkle with hope.

But the fairy came to the poor man's door for the bit of bread and the ale to wash it down, and the poor man who professed had grown sleek and rich and could not practice, and the fairy went hungry and wiser.

So the chicken who was shut out found a little hole close to the ground and squeezed in and sailed the silver water with the whitest swans, curving her neck as snakily and languidly as the duffiest and splendidest. And the two "my dears" stood in her path one day, lined up innocently, blooming with smiles.

And the swan who had been a chicken, and "not that kind," looked at the scenery through them with a lorgnette crusted like ice with diamonds, and frote them purple! And the gooseflesh rises on the little backs of the hopeful two whenever she looms in sight.

"Never saw 'em in my life, dear," the swan whispers to the person she called a "creature" once.

CHAPTER XIV.
The Woman in the Case.

COQUENIL was neither surprised nor disappointed at the meagre results of Alice's visit to the prison. This was merely one move in the game, and he had not been entirely vain. Since he had learned that Kittredge might have used his left hand in firing a pistol, and that he did not suffer with astral or ego pain. This last point was of extreme importance.

And the detective was speedily put in excellent humor by news awaiting him at the Palais de Justice Monday morning that the man sent to London to trace the burned photograph and the five pound notes had already met with success, and telegraphed that the notes in question had been issued to Addison Wilmott, whose bankers were Morton & Co., Rue Scribe.

Quick inquiries revealed the fact that Addison Wilmott was a well-known New Yorker living in Paris—a man of leisure, who was enjoying to the full a large inherited fortune. He and his dashing wife lived in a private hotel on the Avenue Kleber, where they led a gay existence in the smartest and most spectacular circle of the American colony. They gave brilliant dinners. They had several automobiles. They did all the foolish and extravagant things that the others did and a few more.

He was dull, good-natured and a little fat; she was a beautiful woman with extraordinary charm and a little, slight figure, of which she took infinite care. He was supposed to be rich on his wife's money, while she did the thing brilliantly and kept the wheels of American colony gossip (which are busy anyway) turning and spinning until they groaned in utter weariness.

Dashing Pussy Wilmott

What was there that Pussy Wilmott had not done or would not do if the impulse seized her? This was a matter of tireless speculation in the ultra-chic salons through which the fascinating little flitted, envied and adored. She was known to be the daughter of a California millionaire who had left her a fortune, of which the last shred was long ago dispersed.

Before marrying Wilmott she had divorced two husbands, and traveled all over the world, had hunted tigers in India and canoed the breakers (native style) in Hawaii. She lived like a cowboy on the Texas plains, where, it was said, she had worn male clothes. She could swim and shoot and sweat and love. She was altogether selfish, altogether delightful, altogether impossible. In short, she was a law unto herself, and her brilliant personality so far overshadowed Addison that, although he had all the money and most of the right in their frequent quarrels, no one ever spoke of him except as "Pussy Wilmott's husband."

In spite of her selfishness and caprices, Mrs. Wilmott was full of generous impulses and was loyal to her friends. She was certainly not a snob, as witness the fact that she had openly snubbed a certain Grand Duke, not for his immoralities —which she declared afterward were nobody's business—but because of his insufferable stupidity. She either liked or disliked, but she couldn't stand a fool.

Such was the information M. Paul had been able to gather (from swift and special police sources) when he presented himself at the Wilmott Hotel about luncheon time on Monday. Addressing the first starting with some friends for a run down to Fontainebleau in his automobile and he listened impatiently to Coquenil's explanation that he had come in regard to some English bank notes recently paid to Mr. Wilmott and possibly clever forgeries.

Gave Them to His Wife

"Really?" exclaimed Addison.

Coquenil hoped that Mr. Wilmott would give him the notes in question in exchange for genuine ones. This would help the investigation.

"Of course, my dear sir," said the American, "but I haven't the notes, they were spent long ago."

Coquenil was sorry to hear this. He wondered if Mr. Wilmott could remember where the notes were spent. After an interval of effort, Addison remembered that he had changed some French money at Henry's, and had paid two or three to a tailor whose name he did not recall at the moment—he removed again, and then said positively: "Why, yes, I gave five or six of them to Jacques Doucet, the detective."

"I didn't pay them to any one," replied Wilmott. "I gave them to my wife."

"Ah!" said Coquenil, and presently he took his departure with polite assurances, whereupon the unsuspecting Addison tooted away complacently for Fontainbleau.

It was now about 2 o'clock, and the next three hours M. Paul spent with his source of information, studying the career of Pussy Wilmott from special points of view, in preparation for a call upon the lady which he proposed to make later in the afternoon.

He discovered two significant things: First, that, whatever her sexual conduct, Mrs. Wilmott had never openly compromised herself. Love affairs she might have had, but no one could say when or where, or with whom she had had them. And if, as seemed possible, she was the woman in this Anonilo case, then she had kept her relations with Kittredge so profoundly secret

As adjusting this, however, Coquenil secured information that connected Mrs. Wilmott directly with Martinez. It appeared that, among her other excitements, Pussy was passionately fond of gambling. She was known to have won and lost large sums at Monte Carlo and she was a regular follower of the fashionable races in Paris. She had also been seen at the Olympia Billiard Academy, near the Grand Opera, where Martinez and other experts played regularly before eager audiences, among whom betting on the games was the great attraction.

The detective found two bet markers who remembered distinctly that, on several occasions, a handsome woman, answering to the description of Mrs. Wilmott, had wagered five or ten louis on Martinez and had shown a decided admiration for his remarkable skill with the cue.

"He used to talk about this lady," said one of the markers. "He called her the belle Americaine, but I am sure he did not know her real name."

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

OBEY YOUR PARENTS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a little over eighteen years of age, and, though I like a young gentleman very much, my father objects to my going out alone with him in the evening to dances, etc., without being chaperoned by my mother. He wants me to wait another year, as he says I am only a child and have no story my parents. As the young man advises me to go humbling, so as to have more liberty. As it would break my mother's heart if I would leave her, kindly tell me what I should do.

M. G. L.

I DO not think much of a man who advises a girl to leave her home, and if you take my advice you will have nothing more to do with this one. Your father evidently feels that the man is not to be trusted, and that is why he insists on your being chaperoned. If you really felt in love, I daresay your mother would allow you to marry under twenty-two. In the meantime be thanking that you have parents who take such good care of you.

CAPTIVATED BY A LOOK

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Will you kindly give me your advice concerning a change that has come into my life. I am a young man and keeping company with a young lady that I think a lot of, and was going to marry her, for I thought I loved her. But the change came one morning while going to work. I met the one that I know I can never forget, and all we did was take a longing look at each other, and we have passed each other for months and have never looked into each other's eyes till to-day. But since that day it seems to me that she tries to avoid me, but when we do happen to meet I notice her face brightens up and then she will lower her eyes. Now although she is an entire stranger to me, I believe sometime I will be introduced to her. It seems to me that it must happen. Will you please tell me what you think about it?

ANXIOUS.

I THINK you are letting your imagination carry you off your feet. The young woman whom you meet on the car is undoubtedly a modest girl, who naturally lowers her eyes and looks confused when an absolute stranger is bold enough to greet her with a longing look. I feel sorry for the young woman to whom you are engaged, for your fancy is evidently fickle that you can be so easily turned from her.

TIME WILL TELL

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl of eighteen, and know a young man of about twenty-four. He used to call on me every day and always told me that he loved me. Now quite a number of my friends tell me that he is not as worthy as he should be, and tells the same thing to other girls. When I tell him about this he laughs, and says that I should not believe what people say, as he he cares only for me. Dear Miss Fairfax, I have been very good advice to others, and so I hope you will be able to point out if he cares for me or not.

I remain,

B. H. M.

Maiden.

IT might be well to take the young man's word for it until you know positively whether he is single-hearted or not. To be sure, you are very young, and your older friends undoubtedly are better judges of character than are you. If these friends know that he tells other girls the same thing, you should put them out of your thoughts entirely. Time will tell whether you are first in his affections. You are young enough to be able to afford to wait.

A PATIENT WAITER

LAWRENCE J. ANIALT, business manager for David Warfield, brings in from the road the story of the manager of a thrilling melodrama, in one scene of which a husband enters one door an instant after an admirer of his wife has made his exit from another. During a run of a week in —city the manager noticed that one man, jealously from the country, went in every night. Finally he remarked to the man that he must enjoy the performance.

"Tolerably so," remarked the playgoer, "but some night that husband is going to catch that other fellow, and I want to be on hand to see what happens."

Do Not Worry About a Lack of Good Looks

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"Love looks not with the eye, but with the mind,
And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted blind."
—Shakespeare.

JUST lately I have chanced to meet several very charming young brides. They were all delightful and, needless to say, ecstatically happy and characterized by that breezy wholesomeness which sets the American girl above all comers in a class by herself.

I suppose you are expecting me to say that they were all pretty; but, as a matter of fact, not one of them had any claim to beauty save that of youth, health and happiness.

Many girls have the silly idea that men only care for good-looking girls.

Naturally, one admires a pretty face, just as one would admire a pretty picture or ornament, but marriage does not follow as a matter of course.

Men are not fools, my dears, and in anything as serious as marriage a man is not nearly as much biased by externals as you seem to think.

There are, of course, exceptions, but as a rule you will find that when a man marries a pretty woman, he loves her for her mind and heart far more than for her good looks.

One of the brides I speak of said to me:

"You know when I realize what a splendid man I have married, and consider how little I had to offer in the way of good looks it makes me feel that girls set unnecessary value on beauty of face. I have been a plain looking girl and yet I have had some very good men friends and several good chances to marry."

Good Qualities Attract

Mind you, honey girls, I am not telling you that men do not care for beauty, for they do care very much for it, but they care more for goodness and sweetness and cheerfulness.

Think over all your married friends. Are they all beautiful? I am sure that they are not, and yet I wager that they all have good, devoted husbands.

The love that is true and lasting has more than beauty to keep it alive. Beauty can fascinate, but it cannot command love.

If a man only loves you for your beautiful face, don't marry him, his love won't last a year—for it is not real love, merely fascination and desire to possess the beautiful picture.

The plain girl has this advantage over her beautiful sister, that the man who woos her loves her for her beauties of mind and soul and depends upon her for the charm of her companionship. His is not fascination, but the real thing, true love itself.

And that's the thing to look for and to wait for, dears, real love. The real thing is so precious and wonderful that you cannot afford to take a substitute.

When a man gives you reason to believe that it is your good looks that charm him, go to him!

That is all very well from your point of view. Just at present my good looks seem very desirable to me than any other quality could be, but how about me? I have a woman's heart and I claim my woman's right to be loved for myself, for my mind, for my soul, for my sympathetic and features. No, thank you, sir. I will wait for a man with greater discrimination and appreciation than that of a mere matinée idol!

If a woman is worth having at all, she is worth loving for what is noblest and best in her, and she is a goose when she marries a man who does not realize that fact.

Qualities That Retain Love.

"There is nothing in the world to equal the companionship of a broad-minded, intelligent, sympathetic woman," said an earnest young man to me not long ago.

There may be many men in the world who do not appreciate woman's best side, but there are myriads who do, and they are the men to marry.

Beauty is a great thing, dears, but it is not half as important as goodness or sympathy. These are the qualities that make a man reverence and adore his wife.

No matter how plain you are, you can be good and true and sympathetic, and you have just as good a chance to win a good man and make him happy as though you were the most radiant beauty on earth. Indeed, in no one could you be more sure, but goodness and sympathy can and do.

Don't worry if you lack beauty, but if you think of those other qualities you have good cause to worry, for until you cultivate them you will never be the guiding star of any man's destiny and happiness.

But present she can more than fill
An ordinary easy chair.

New England Far Famed For Fine Turkey Dinners

Ever since the days of Priscilla Alden down in Plymouth, New England house wives have been most clever cooks.

When George Washington wanted something really delicious in the way of cookery he used to visit Boston and accept the hospitality of some domicile where the delectable dishes were famous.

Oh, yes, for generations and generations the New England dinner table has been a thing of joy.

And it looks as though New Englanders are going to have about the best Thanksgiving ever this year.

Chronic Insomnia And Indigestion

The One Is Almost Always Associated With and Caused by the Other.

Sleep has been flittingly called "tired nature's sweet restorer." It is a condition in which the involuntary functions such as nutrition, circulation, respiration, etc., go on as usual, while the voluntary powers are in repose, and the system undergoes needed repairs. No one has ever been known to live longer than three weeks without sleep. It is as necessary in physical economy as food and drink.

Insomnia or chronic sleeplessness is a symptom with which nearly every sufferer from dyspepsia is annoyed, either constantly or at frequent and irregular intervals. This inability to sleep normally is a very prominent manifestation of indigestion, and exhibits itself in different forms. In some cases sleep may come as its accustomed time, but it does not bring repose, and the person awakens entirely too soon, and is unable to fall asleep again. In others the victim lies awake practically all night, tossing and rolling, and finally drops into a troubled and unrestful slumber at daybreak. Still others, though they may apparently sleep soundly, are annoyed with the incubus, or nightmare, with its horrors of overwhelming waves, falls from precipitous heights and attacks by infuriated and unhuchible monsters.

All of these distressing symptoms are traceable to an irritated and enfeebled stomach, and the same is true of grinding the teeth and twitching and forking of the muscles during sleep.

Insomnia is rarely a disease by itself, but is nearly always a symptom of another disease, such as dyspepsia, and in treating this complaint many persons in their efforts to "woo the god of sleep" resort to the use of such hypnotics, sedatives, soporifics and narcotics as the bromides, chloral hydrate, Dover powders and even morphin.

No greater mistake than this could well be made, and the reckless use of such drugs has caused many a sudden death, while in other cases even moderate use has sometimes led to the drug-using habit among those who resorted to the use of sleeping powders.

To cure insomnia or sleeplessness the oldest should be to remove the cause, and as dyspepsia is the underlying cause in a large percentage of cases, no better or safer remedy can be employed than STUARTS DYSPEPSIA TABLETS. By digesting every particle of food in the stomach, the active and exciting cause of insomnia is cut short at its source and removed.

These tablets contain only wholesome ingredients, and there is no danger of falling into drug-using habits from their use. Every sufferer from insomnia should avoid the egregious error of using hypnotic drugs, as they never cure the trouble, but only make matters worse in the end.

Begin taking Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at once, using one or two after each meal and the same number at bed time. If a nervous wreck to have a box of these powerful digestives close at hand during the night, so that in case you are troubled with dyspeptic insomnia, uneasiness in the stomach, or any other symptom of indigestion, quick relief may be obtained.

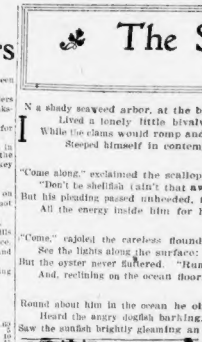
Purchase a package from your druggist at once for 50 cents, and get rid of your insomnia and indigestion. Send us your name and address for sample package. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Building, Marshall, Mich.

WASHBURN-CROSBY'S

GOLD MEDAL FLOUR

The Submarine Philosopher

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE



IN a shady seaweed arbor, at the bo tom of the harbor,
Lived a lonely little bivalve, to reflectiveness a prey
While the clams would romp and royster, this sad, meditative oyster
Steeped himself in contemplation in the wave's intensest day.

"Come along," exclaimed the scallop, with a rudely playful wallop
"Don't be shellfish (ain't that awful?), but be like an oyster ought,"
But his pleading passed unheeded, for the little oyster needed
All the energy inside him for his philosophical thought.

"Come," yajoled the careless flounder, "be a gay, aquatic rounder;
See the lights along the surface: leave these boulders dark and dank."
But the oyster never faltered. "Run along, fool fish," he muttered
And, reclining on the ocean floor, he thank and thank and thank

Round about him in the ocean he observed the life and motion.
Heard the angry dogfish barking, saw the crawfish backward crawl.
Saw the sunfish brightly gleaming and the starfish faintly beaming.
And he thought about the reason and the purpose of it all.

"Do these things occur by chance, or are they planned? And what's the answer?
Why do scales grow on a codfish when they don't upon a trout?
Why are eels so undulating?" Thus he sat there speculating,
Quite convinced it was his mission and his duty to find out.

But before there was an issue to his thoughts his mental thesis
Wore away with constant friction, and one day among the murk
Of the seaweed he subsided, still intensely gasping "Why did".
Then his think-tank ceased from troubling and he died from over work.

But the thought waves that were started by that oyster ere he parted
From existence have raised questions that resound forevermore.
Other thoughtful oysters state them, doubt them, answer them, debate them,
Then pass on, and their survivors are no wiser than before.

"Hark, the Herald Angels sing," Beecham's Pills are just the thing. "Peace on earth and mercy mild," Two for man and one for child.

A great many years ago, some wag created this perveraion, but its happy jingle along with the sober truth it suggests has made this verse a byword with millions of people. It illustrates the great popularity in which Beecham's Pills are held and the wonderful good that they are doing. Every year shows a marvelous increase in this popularity and it is an established fact that in the communities where Beecham's Pills are used, the health and morality of the people are enhanced.

Every reader should know Beecham's Pills—learn their power to keep the system in good order, preserve the vigor of glorious youth—to cheer and brighten old age. They regulate the bowels, help the liver, aid the kidneys, promote digestion and prevent the coming of serious sicknesses. Thousands of men have been made sturdy and strong—thousands of women have been made healthy and happy, through use of Beecham's Pills. Anyone who does not know them is doing without one of the greatest known helps to health and happiness.

Operas and Receptions Keep Debutantes Busy

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Debutantes are certainly having their innings and along with their regular attendance of the opera come such a multiple of gay affairs that one wonders how long the glow of health in their happy faces will last.

They are filled with excitement, anticipation and wonderment at it all now, but if they keep up this pace I shall expect to see them soon begin to droop, and poor little tired, faded lilies are such pitifully appealing sights!

Of course, they will all be in evidence at the opera again to-night and then to-morrow they must put in an appearance at the coming out reception of their sister-debutante, Margaret Richardson, who makes her formal bow at the tea which her mother, Mrs. William Minott Richardson, is giving for her at her home on Brattle street, Cambridge.

Among the young girls who will assist the mother hostess at the tables are the Misses Dorothy Draper, Mary Parkman, Constance Arnold, Francesca Warren, Helen Austin, Katherine Doty, Margery Peabody, Katherine Sedgwick, Margaret Warner, Marion Swan, Edna Thorp and Marie Peacock.

To-day Mrs. William B. Cabot is giving a luncheon at her Marlboro street home in honor of her daughter, Miss Eleanor Cabot and Miss Richardson and Mrs. Henry M. Whitney have chosen the same days to present their daughters and to-morrow will also mark the formal presentation of Miss Anne Minot Allen.

On Friday Mrs. Daniel Anthony is to give a small and informal luncheon for her daughter, Miss Ruth Anthony, at the country mansion in Newton and that same evening comes the first of the four smart dances in the G. Hall, Cambridge, for which the patronesses are Mrs. Thorp, Mrs. Richardson, Mrs. Peter and Mrs. Quincy Shaw.

Mrs. Henry Parkman is also giving a tea to introduce her daughter, Miss Mary Parkman to-day. The hospitable tea takes place at the Parkman home on Commonwealth avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel D. Warren, Jr. (Helen Thomas), who have been traveling abroad since their marriage in June and who were expected to return this month to Boston, have suddenly changed their plans and decided to remain abroad another year. They will spend most of their time in Germany.

E. L. Wendt and family of Brookline are returning to their winter home to-day after a long season at their country home in Newport. The family usually remain in town considerably earlier in the season and have friends have been wondering that they had been planning a Thanksgiving at their country place as so many others are doing.

The wife, Annaheme, in Stockbridge, which the Joseph H. Choates have occupied all Summer and part of the Autumn and which the Arthur Brooks have occupied more than any of the Lenox colony with the exception of the Choates, is likely to be occupied for some time this Autumn by Mr. and Mrs. George de Gersdorff, who have spent Summers in Paris. Mrs. de Gersdorff is the Choates' only unmarried daughter. Mrs. Choate has been in New York on visits to her daughter, Mrs. Mabel Choate.

Among the guests who spoke in Paris recently at the Society of Men of Letters was Professor Hiram Percy of this city, who is professor of mechanical engineering in Paris and is soon to begin a series of lectures at the Sorbonne in the American Branch there.

James Hazen Hyde, formerly of New York, presided at the dinner. The French guests of honor were Professor Emile Boutroux, to be lecture at Harvard during the coming season, Senator Denys Cochin who have heard Professor Boutroux's lectures in this city, will arrange to hear him while he is here.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Andrews of this city will go to New York to-morrow and will probably be present at the horse show in that city.

Miss Edith Weissenborn, who has been a member of the Newport colony this season, has gone to New York for the Winter.

The riders in the Myopia Hunt Club met yesterday at Dunstable corner, North street, in Hamilton. To-morrow the meet will be at Springvale at 2.15 and on Saturday there will be a New Hampshire run.

One of the events which the younger set are celebrating with pleasant anticipations is the dance which Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Loring of Boston and Pride's Crossing is to give in honor of their daughter, Miss May Loring. Miss Loring is a gifted musician, and has an able talent for amateur theatricals.

Mrs. William H. Coolidge is making plans to give a tea and reception in honor of her daughter, Miss Isabella Coolidge, who is one of the season's debutantes. The reception will be given at Grey Cliff, the estate of Newton Centre, and some of the Coolidges.

Senator and Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge have just closed their Summer home at Nahant, and are stopping in this city for a few days. They are planning to go to Washington on Thursday for the Winter. Their son, John Ellerton Lodge, has just returned to the bachelor apartments in Mt. Vernon place.

Members of the Boston colony at Magnolia this Summer remember Count Don Epifanio Portela, the Argentine Minister to Washington, and Senorita Portela very pleasantly. The latter occupied the Reed cottage, where they entertained considerably during the past few months.

Their departure has created a new residence in Washington for the Winter. Their house was the one the Germans occupied by Senator and Mrs. Fairbanks and is at No. 2 Sam Memorial Building, near Dupont Circle. It is a large house and well ordered for entertaining.

Mrs. De Forest Hopkinson is expected to open her Winter residence on Commonwealth avenue for the first of the month. She is now the guest of her late husband's parents at their home on Pinckney. Before returning to town she has decided to spend a few days at her country home in Medfield.

Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, who has been abroad some months, left for New York to-day with her daughter, Miss Ethel Roosevelt. They are on the steamship Moltke. While abroad, in particular, Mrs. Roosevelt has been shown many courtesies by the Austrian court by the Emperor and Empress.

While in Italy, where they were the guests of Mrs. Leonard Jerome Jr. and Miss Carew, they were shown about in many sightseeing tours in the royal state of the commander Long of the Navy, who has been transferred as military and American envoys at the Italian capitol.

NOT COMFORTED.

Yes, it must be a terrible thing to go through life without your limb. But you know a good companion will be restored to you in the next world.

"I know it will, sonia, but dat don't encourage me, for I ain't got no use for a baby, an' it won't come within a couple of feet of de ground when it's restored."

A REASON FOR IT

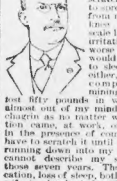
KNEE TO ANKLE A MASS OF HUMOR

Suffering Simply Indescribable—Had to Scratch Till Blood Ran—Health Undermined from Lack of Sleep—Gave Up Hope but

CUTICURA FREED HIM FROM SKIN-TORMENT

"About seven years ago a small abrasion appeared on my right leg just above my ankle. I irritated the sore in that I began to itch and it began to constantly spread from my ankle to the knee. One solid sore like a scab. The irritation was always worse at night and I would not allow me to sleep, or my wife either, as it was completely undermining my health. My flesh got fifty pounds in weight and was almost out of my mind with pain and chagrin as no matter what the location came, at work, on the street or in the presence of company, I would have to scratch it until I had the blood running down into my shoe. I simply cannot describe my suffering those seven years. The pain, mortification, days and nights I spent and wife is simply indescribable on paper and only has to experience it to know what it is.



"I tried all kinds of doctors and remedies, but they were all a dose thrown my money down a sewer. They all failed. I gave it up for a while and fill me with hope only to leave me as bad as but if not worse. I had given up all hope when I saved Cuticura Remedies and was induced by my wife to give the Cuticura Remedies a trial. After taking the Cuticura Remedies for a little while I began to see a change and after taking a dozen bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, in conjunction with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, the trouble had entirely disappeared and my was as fine as the day I was born. Now after a lapse of six months and no sign of a recurrence I feel perfectly safe in extending to you my heartfelt thanks for the good the Cuticura Remedies have done for me, I shall always recommend them to my friends." (Signed) W. H. White, Mgr. Label Dept., Tyrus, Union No. 2, 312 E. Cabot St., Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 4 and Apr. 15, 1905."

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

STOCKS WEAK; LOCAL STOCK THEN RECOVER

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Expectation of a higher call money rate to-day caused weakness in the stock market. At Paris and New York Central have been weak recently they were naturally the most vulnerable to attacks and were used to stop the downward movement. Losses averaging a point were scored early in the leading shares.

Amalgamated declined nearly a point. When the balance of the list rallied it developed a favorable result from its low level Amalgamated recovered its loss so quickly as to attract attention. Smelters and Interborough-Metropolitan shares were also leaders in the recovery. The strength of the copper shares was due to the expectation that the report of the Copper Producers' Association to be published to-day would show a decrease in surplus copper metal of about 8,000,000 pounds.

American shares were higher in London, with Steel the favorite. Copper shares were active and strong on the New York curb. Silver shares were steady on light transactions.

BRUSH LEADS TO CAPTURE OF BOYS

BATH, Me., Nov. 10.—With the accomplished sale of his old clothes brush as a primary clew, City Marshal Charles T. Small of Bath reached the climax of the mystery which has wrought up Bath citizens, when Fred M. Wentworth, aged eighteen, and Roy Bourgeois, aged seventeen, were locked up in the county jail, charged with making a brutal assault on Mrs. Emily Bowen, aged seventy-eight, and her sister, robbing her house on the night of October 31.

Mrs. Russell lives in a lonely spot in the outskirts of the city and was unable to call anyone to her aid, and the peculiarly brutal assault so aroused the citizens that the city government offered a reward of $250 for the arrest of malefactors, and Mr. John S. Hyde offered $100 additional. The rewards will be paid out to Marshal Small.

The SUNDAY AMERICAN is the Seventh Day Wonder of New England.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

STATE STREET, Nov. 10.—Trading was of small proportions in the stock market this forenoon and the attitude was that of a waiting one. Sentiment is optimistic regarding copper shares, and anything definite regarding the proposed copper pool by Amalgamated would quickly be used as an argument pro or con.

Lake copper showed a firm tone in accordance with favorable results from its run of ore now being treated at the Franklin mine's mill. Although there was bearish talk on Utah Copper this stock advanced a point in this market to 52, although it sold lower than this in New York.

Amalgamated stiffened fractionally to 88 from the low, principally on buying by arbitrage brokers. Copper warrants eased slightly in London this forenoon. Superior Copper was less active than of late and eased slightly.

North Butte was firmer up to 60. There was a noticeable investment demand for this stock. Heavy selling of Hancock stock at the price stiffened to 154¾, the rights also improving to 1¾.

Ely Central was again the curb feature breaking from 81⅛ to 75 cents. Raw-hide Coalition went off in sympathy to 17 cents. Prices otherwise were about steady.

FIGHT EXTRADITION IN THE PORTER CASE

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 10.—Republican papers from Governor Draper of Massachusetts requesting the extradition of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Porter of Green wood, charged with kidnapping Anna Connors, a seven-year-old Boston girl, have been received by Governor Pothier.

Judge L. T. Murphy of River Point, Counsel for the Porters, said that the extradition proceedings would be resisted to the utmost.

The chief bullish talk still centres in the copper shares.

With call money at 5 per cent., and fears of what President Taft might be thinking about saying in his message to Congress, and with talk of a general demand on the part of railway employes for a wage advance to match the advance in freight rates which the leading companies are secretly campaigning for, the market should show a sagging tendency.

Ignoring the fundamental reasons for the market decline, professional traders talk of manipulation to unload on all the weak holdings, especially in Steel. Everybody is carrying short Steel. Since Steel is full up to, and the bucket-shops have thousands of stops in Steel, they are looking there for talk of letting it back down to about 81 in September, and for a grand advance to par if Steel is permitted to break below 80. there will be a desperate struggle to get it up. A low price at 80 would be fatal to any attempt to put it to par. Should it break to 84 it would be a strong defense against the possibility of another in September to the dividend of 1 per cent. now is in such a position that questions of intrinsic value are not considered, and have no proper place in a consideration of fluctuations.

One thing is evident beyond dispute—the situation in regard to copper metal is improving rapidly. Copper wire makers are operating practically on a full and normal, and there has been a falling off in electrical business. But the business of the copper producers is on a tremendous proportions of a boom. Some of the biggest sheet mills are far behind with their orders for immediate delivery. The result is that copper is being advanced to 13 cents on a substantial market, and the highest point reached the year have been made in the past ten days.

Negotiations are progressing favorably for a combination of producers to restrict production, but they have not gone far enough to warrant the calling of conferences to say whether they will be successful. The combination is proceeding on the theory that the new mines developed by the prosperity during the year than made up for the depreciation of the deep mines that have been taken out. White-Phelps Dodge and Calumet & Hecla interests are being considered out of the proposed combination, their representatives have attended conferences.

Pennsylvania stock is causing trouble because the Street is adopting the view originally expressed by this writer that it was rather expensive financing for a railroad to pay a price of 129 merely in order to give a bonus of $27,000,000 to raise $80,000,000 of capital. It is said that the bankers who have been receiving underwriting profits in the past are sympathetic their disapproval of Pennsylvania's attempt to do its own financing.

While nobody seemed to know exactly when an announcement would be made of the Standard Oil dividend, it was said to be asserted confidently that the matter would not be much longer delayed. The rise in rails was one of the strongest features of the railroad list.

Three railroad presidents have stated specifically that they are not interested in any campaign to increase freight rates. Perhaps they will explain why recognized railroad presidents are appearing in the newspapers articles designed to prove the need of an increase in freight rates. The press agents in question are eminently respectable, have always been employed by the greatest institutions of the country, and there is no reason to think under no circumstances could they be induced to misrepresent the attitude of the leading railroads. The three railroad presidents should repeat their public statements immediately. If it were not for the recent repudiation of this press agent campaign for higher freight rates the confidence in the railroads would be greater.

London accounts attribute the fractional weaknesses in silver recently shown to selling by both India and China. The dearness of money and the decreasing interest in silver during the week and the decreasing interest in silver during the week and the absence of speculative buying have also been felt. A gleam of hope reaches us from Mexico, where it is reported that the silk export trade are distinctly favorable. The price of silver is now so low that it exists at present to improve the situation materially. Any rise in silver will be felt only moderately in London, has bought somewhat freely in Bombay.

According to Welding Ring, president of the New York Produce Exchange, top prices for most commodities products of this month have not yet been reached. Mr. Ring says: "Improving conditions during the last decrease during October was marked. Great activity in practically all lines of business are reported from all sections. There have been more failures, as a result of staple and manufactured goods, since the first of this month, but there is nowhere a growing disposition on the part of sellers to restrict their output for future delivery unless at considerable advance in prices.

A Grave Crisis in World Politics

The mystery surrounding the circumstances of the sudden recall of Mr. Charles R. Crane from his mission to China, a mystery illuminated hitherto by mere tallow-dips of frivolous pretext and vague surmise, has at last been pierced by a shaft of light.

Two facts are disclosed—both portentous and disturbing.

In the first place, it is seen that the State Department has virtually reversed the policy of the open door in the Orient—a policy to which the good faith of Americans was pledged with high enthusiasm in the days of heroic resolve that followed the international march to Pekin.

And, secondly, it is seen that Secretary Knox takes his orders in this matter not from President Taft, but from Tokio.

We call upon the people of the United States to cancel these facts, now, in the last moment of opportunity, before the intrigues of Japanese diplomacy and the selfish plots of American financiers shall have carried our national honor and our national interests to irremediable disaster.

A statesman of the widest and most accurate knowledge in Oriental affairs, whose name, if we were free to mention it, would carry the weight of the highest authority, says that "the open door is no longer a living issue"; that already the work of John Hay has been silently undone and that the door of Oriental freedom and of Occidental opportunity in the east has been definitely closed.

But this we refuse to believe.

We believe that there is yet time enough for the enlightend indignation of America to burn its way to the heart of Star-Chamber conspiracies.

We believe that it is still possible to maintain the guarantees of the treaty of Portsmouth and to restore the currents of political and commercial liberty in the east.

In this endeavor the American people will not need to act alone. Our endeavor will be backed by the more intelligent public opinion of Europe, when the things that are now being done in the darkness of cabinet councils are proclaimed upon the housetops.

Obviously the President of the United States holds the master-key of the present situation.

To him the American makes a first appeal. During these latter weeks, while the plot in the Far East has been thickening, Mr. Taft was absent from Washington and was preoccupied with other affairs.

We call upon him now to take account of the recent developments in Manchuria.

Upon him rests the final responsibility for the conduct of the State Department.

His own historic speech at Shanghai is a classic of American policy in the east. And if his Secretary of State, in his absence, reversed the program to which he is committed in the eyes of the whole world it is Mr. Taft himself who should feel the most poignant impulse of resentment.

The democratic consciences of the world—under the leadership of the President of the United States—can rebuke and overrule this sinister plan of Oriental diplomacy.

The Right of Trial by Jury

The Buck stove case promises to be a cause celebre because of the fundamental legal principles concerned in it.

Not only is the question of a free press involved in the original injunction issued against the officers of the American Federation of Labor, but also the pronouncing of long jail sentences upon three conspicuous and influential men for a technical contempt of court has brought into the foreground the whole question of the right of trial by jury.

It would seem that the settled traditions of Anglo-Saxon law are on the side of the Federationists in their demand for a jury trial, and that they are the champions, in this contention, not only of the cause of labor, but of the cause of common civil liberty.

Of course, there can be no question of the right of any court to use whatever force may be immediately necessary to protect itself and its decrees from being treated with contempt.

But there is a serious question whether a severe punishment, involving a stigma of criminality, ought to be inflicted by an offended judge acting in his own case and without the advice of a jury.

Such a practice may easily lead to the gravest abuses—undermining the guaranties of free government.

A Promise of Longevity

The little book on the lengthening of human life, just issued by the National Conservation Commission, presents some propositions that are sure to attract general attention.

The author, Professor Irving Fisher, of Yale University, says that man, like the lower mammals, should under normal conditions live about five times the length of his growing period.

And, since a man's growth is not completed until the age of thirty, he should not die of mere age much before his hundred and fiftieth year.

He says that the average span of human life began to increase about 350 years ago; that four years were gained in the seventeenth century, four more in the eighteenth, and nearly nine in the nineteenth.

The professor's attempt to estimate in dollars the economic value of the average American may provoke some jests and some sneers.

But it must at least be admitted that the lives of the citizens of a country constitute its chief economic asset.

EDITORIAL POINTS

Have you been to "Boston—1916" exposition yet? There's about everything in the educational and civic improvement line included in the exhibits.

Milk ten cents? Will someone invent a condensed cow?

Of course you are going to see that $100,000 Van Dyck at the new Museum of Fine Arts. And by the way, did you ever see that $60,000 Velasquez they have out there?

King Edward was sixty-eight years old yesterday. Remember when he visited Boston?

Instead of cornering wheat, corn and the like, it is now quite the thing to corner signatures—under Plan 2, you know.

With the price of meat going up where only aeroplanists can buy it, why can't Dr. Cook tell us where we can buy some of that long-distance pemmican stuff?

Even if you don't attend the opera you can read what the "400" wore.

Thanksgiving next!

The Steinheil trial seems to be a "melier-dramen."

Advance Thanksgiving Stories

By WEX JONES

I.—THE POPULAR PHILIPPINE STORY

CHERE was not a sound in the jungle.

The loud chatter of the ja-ja bird broke the stillness.

Harold Hoople started.

The ja-ja bird repeated its cry.

Harold Hoople started again.

What was that?

Ha! A stealthy footstep!

Harold's finger tightened upon the trigger of his bolo. He would die fighting to the last.

While waiting for the sound of the footprinter to be repeated Harold reviewed his life. How well he remembered the little village in Berkshire County. The little cottage buried in magnolia blossoms and the tiny garden patch vivid with spinach and gorgeous eggplant. And Alice, the little playmate who used to swing on the little gate with him. Did she remember?

A large, hot tear broke away from Harold's port lamp and dashed itself to pieces against the unfeeling ground.

Suddenly Harold remembered that it was Thanksgiving Day. He thought of large, fat turkeys.

Heedless of the footprintings, he turned and run in the direction of the barracks.

And back in Berkshire County a girl named Alice went on eating mince pie as if she were very happy.

II.—THE GRIDIRON STORY

It was the day of the great Thanksgiving game between Squeedunk College and Nebkota University.

Jack Avoirdupois played fullback for Squeedunk.

Nebkota had a team of human titans with the weight of elephants.

Avoirdupois was a lightweight. He came from Troy.

But he was as full of grit as a newly caught clam.

Unknown to even his own coaches Jack had fitted himself with two planes shaped like the wings of a seagull.

The first time he got the ball was on his own line.

Did this dismay him?

No; it caused him no dismay.

He leaped into the air, and, holding the ball in his mouth, spread out his arms and soared over the heads of the players until he reached the end of the field.

His wings were so good that he could not alight.

But was he daunted?

Knot.

He hooked his feet around the goalpost and climbed down to score.

In the rush his wings were broken and the Nebkota players smiled hard, cruel smirks.

III.—THE WANDERER'S RETURN

It was a pleasant scene in the large oak-panelled room, the table shining with silver and glass.

But there was one empty chair, and a shadow of sorrow passed across the face of any one who looked at it.

"I wonder if he will return," sadly said the gray-haired old man.

"I hope he turns back," said the golden-haired little tot.

There was a sound at the door.

A rush to open it.

"It's him," was the glad—if ungrammatical—shout.

The pet poodle had returned.

"Come, now," said her father, after she had kissed him effusively two or three times, "what is it you want? Out with it!"

"I don't want anything," replied the girl. "I want to give you something."

"Indeed, what is it?"

"A son-in-law. Jack asked me to speak to you about it."
